Devotion and Oblivion.
We Are Deep-Sea Fish.
Europe's Plan for Us.
The Sailor's Ashes.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE

POOR GANDHI, victim of his sincerity and devotion to the poor, lies in the sixth day of his fast at Poona, India, too weak to move or lift his shrunken arms to work at the pathetic "hand loom' or spinning wheel, with which he asks India to oppose the giant textile industry of Britain.

He has fifteen more days to go without food. He will keep to his vow, and doctors fear that he cannot live through it.

If he dies there will be some disturbance, then oblivion that covers millions of devoted men and women that have sacrificed themselves vainly.

One good FIGHT for freedom is worth a thousand fasts.

IF YOU tire of earthly facts and figures, read Sir James Jeans' book, "The Universe Around Us," previously mentioned here some time ago. We feel sorry for deep-sea fish, living a mile down in the ocean, seeing a few specks of light above, knowing nothing of what goes on outside their kingdom of water.

We might feel sorry for ourselves, living at the bottom of our atmospheric ocean, seeing a few specks of light, that we call stars, knowing nothing about the real universe.

THE WRITER has prepared a short article about "The Universe Around Us," to be published tomorrow in Sunday newspapers. If big figures interest you, you will find them in Jeans' book.

The "electric disturbance" that reaches your ear through the radio receiver travels around the earth seven times in one second. Travelling at the same speed, it would take a million years or more to reach some of the "island universes" outside our little corner in space.

The MacMillan Company, which publishes the book, has promised this writer, if possible, to produce it in cheaper form. Young people should read it for enlightenment, old people for comfort.

EUROPE IS worried by Hitler's demonstrations and his demand for equal armaments. Europe ought to know that Germany is not going to stay forever under the obnoxious terms of the Versailles treaty, but even the British, who want no more war and dislike to threaten idly, talk about the treaty "sanctions," held as a club over Germany's head.

This means that Rhine territory might again be occupied by the Allies, assuming that they could get together long enough to do it.

THE PRESENT hope of Europe, next to skipping the debt, lies in a proposed agreement by this sometimes silly nation to suspend our tariff protection to aid foreign workers and manufacturers at the expense of our own.

If Czechoslovakia, making shoes under conditions with which we cannot compete, could drive the remaining workers out of American shoe factories, if England could take over all our textile industries or Japan our rubber goods and electric bulb business, that would make foreigners, temporarily, contented.

It would not, however, do much to help the twelve to fifteen million idle men now walking the streets of the United States.

HERMAN TOMFELDE, sailor, dead in Hoboken, N. J., last December, directed that his ashes be scattered over the ocean. His brother, Oscar, threw them into the sea, container and all, and they have been washed ashore on the coast of Scotland.

That far away floating of a dead sailor's ashes is interesting. To know whither, in infinite time and space, that sailor's soul has floated since he died would be more interesting. We bury or burn our bodies in various ways, but we are all scattered on the ocean of space. And we rarely give a thought to it.

EXPERTS SAY the completion of the St. Lawrence power project, supplying electricity for New York State at such low rates as Canadians have always had, thanks to government ownership, will create 80,000 "power jobs."

Mr. Cosgrove, of the state power authority, foresees a payroll of $90,000,000 and an additional New York State factory output of $220,000,000 a year.

All probable. IF those that control corporations and power in the United States will give their consent.

KING GEORGE of England has rheumatism of the shoulder and could not attend his royal court in Buckingham Palace yesterday. Doctors will let the King to have one or two teeth pulled out. Other doctors will say:

"Wait until we find where the focus of infection really is."

If you have rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis or any similar affliction, there is some spot on your body breeding poisonous germs, usually some of the accursed streptococcus family. The "focus" is often in the teeth, less often in the tonsils, frequently in the intestines, always hard, sometimes impossible to locate.

EUROPE SUGGESTS that President Roosevelt will come over to London, like a messenger boy, and let Europeans tell him what this country ought to do to oblige foreign countries. Many Americans would like to see a message to Europe from President Roosevelt saying:

"The United States will do as it thinks best about its own affairs, and its President will not cross the Atlantic Ocean for instructions as to how to run this country."

HITLER FOR 'TRUCE' ON ARMS

Nazi Chief to Offer Compromise Plan To Powers

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT
International News Service.

BERLIN, May 13.—Chancellor Adolf Hitler will appear before the Reichstag next Wednesday to present a conciliatory compromise plan for world disarmament which may lead to an international arms agreement at Geneva.

This was learned by International News Service today as reports from London and Paris disclosed growing sentiment in favor of enforcing the penalty provisions of the Treaty of Versailles "to the hilt" in the event Germany insists upon re-arming.

Hitler will not only explain Germany's views on disarmament but will call upon other countries for a complete clarification of the European political situation.

IMPORTANT ADDRESS

His address promises to be one of the most important delivered before any parliament since the World War.

He will announce the aims of Germany's new Nazi government and declare that before the world economic conference meets in London there must be an international understanding through "the triumph of common sense."

Hitler's speech before a hurriedly summoned Reichstag next Wednesday, a Reichstag which he dismissed when he assumed power, will afford the Chancellor his first opportunity to announce his foreign policy before a waiting world.

He will not miss the opportunity. He will do his best to show that the new Germany feels strong enough to compromise.

It is realized here that the strong policy adopted at the

SINGER BEATEN, NEAR DEATH

MONONGAHELA, Pa., May 13.—Prof. Reese R. Reese, 50, Pittsburgh radio singer and choir director, was beaten here today, perhaps fatally, police reported.

He was found on the street with his head badly cut and his face discolored. At Monongahela Memorial Hospital physicians said uremic poisoning had developed and that little hope was held for his recovery. He was on the way to the home of his sister, Mrs. Mary Wilson, of Monongahela, when waylaid, police said.

Chicago 'Red-Head' Gets Fortune in Her Third Suit

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—(AP.)—Mrs. Estelle M. Wolon, titian-haired Chicago divorcee, today held a verdict for $25,000 given by a jury in her breach of promise suit against Charles Newbold Welsh, wealthy Philadelphia clubman.

The 12 men on the jury returned the verdict late yesterday after deliberating about three hours. Mrs. Wolon was not in the courtroom to hear the verdict. She had not asked for any fixed sum, though in her first two actions, which were non-suited, she sought $250,000.

The case went to the jury after the reading of more letters which spoke casually of a $100,000 gift, mink coats and trips to the world's playspots.

One of the letters written by the divorcee to her former globe-trotting companion, said:

"I know that you promised to look after me, but I have no proof that I will get the $100,000 at your death."

POLICE BLOCK STREET CARS IN FEUD

Gun Stops Snow Plow Ripping Blockades In Rochester Feud

ROCHESTER, Pa., May 13.—The months-old squabble between the Beaver Valley Railways Company and Rochester Council over paving repairs surged to the surface early today when a snowplow moved down Brighton avenue ripping down police-erected red-lighted barricades to prevent the operation of cars.

Ten days ago Council issued an ultimatum to the railways company to start repairs or cease operations. The period ended at midnight and police drove 10 huge spikes topped by red lights between the rails at 50-foot intervals. At 4:40 a. m. the snowplow moved out of the barns. It was followed by a street car.

POLICE GUN THREAT

When the last barricade had been bowled over Patrolman Burns (Shadow) McKee, drew his service revolver and ordered Roy Garen, operator of the snow plow to stop. He said:

"If you go any further, I'll shoot you."

Garen stopped.

As the snow plow started down the street, Assistant Police Chief Frank Craig, on a motorcycle, pulled in between the snow plow and street car. The motorcycle was pushed down the street nearly a block in the railways company right of way.

The police in their efforts to prevent the operation of cars defied Burgess Stewart Burns. Burns, a street railways company motorman, asked the police not to in-

35,000 TO SEE PREAKNESS

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 13.—They are going to run the old Preakness today, just as they have off and on these 60 years, though the starters be all too few, the track all too heavy and the withdrawals what they might.

Today's distance is a mile and three-sixteenths. A crowd of 35,000 or as many as old Pimlico can conveniently hold, will be there, including official Washington and unofficial North America. The purse will be $25,000.

Heavy rains of last night and this morning converted the racing strip into a quagmire, but there were no scratches for the Preakness when those for other races were posted shortly before noon, and indications were that the entire field of 11 might start.

Reports that Broker's Tip might not start were dispelled this morning when the trainer of E. R. Bradley's Kentucky Derby winner said the horse was fit and would go to the post. Mrs. Silas M. Mason's Head Play, beaten by Broker's Tip in the Derby, ruled an 8-5 favorite to gain revenge today.

COUZENS SEES MORGAN GRIP ON TREASURY

Fight on Acheson as Woodin Assistant Brewing

By PAUL C. YATES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Possibility of a serious fight by Senate liberals against confirmation of Dean C. Acheson, Washington lawyer, as Undersecretary of the Treasury today caused concern among administration leaders on Capitol Hill.

Charges leveled against the Treasury Department by Senator Couzens (Rep.), of Michigan, during an attack on Acheson's legal connections delayed final Senate action until Monday.

Couzens asserted that during the Hoover administration the Internal Revenue Bureau in the Treasury Department was a hotbed of favoritism, with irregularities rampant.

MORGAN 'DOMINATION'

Then he charged that J. P. Morgan has dominated Treasury policies "ever since I have been in Congress." Turning his barrage of criticism against the Roosevelt Treasury appointees, he declared:

"I know that Acheson and Secretary of the Treasury Woodin will be just as much the agents of Morgan & Co. as any one you could put in the Treasury."

Among the big companies which Couzens listed as clients of Acheson's law firm were the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the Radio Corporation of America, Charles E. Mitchell, indicted former head of the National City Bank, of New York, and, on an occasional basis, J. P. Morgan & Co.

Couzens said:

"I protest against the connection that inevitably will exist between this law office and the Treasury Department."

MELLON CASE

In his description of the Treasury Department set-up under former secretaries Andrew W. Mellon and Ogden L. Mills, Couzens asserted:

"Many notes were found in the Internal Revenue Bureau saying, 'This is a Mellon institution and no taxes are to be assessed."

Mellon's income tax returns are now being investigated by the Department of Justice.

Debtor France

CONSIDER THE WAYS of a debtor nation.

They are not the ways of an individual debtor nor a corporate debtor, nor any other kind of a debtor.

These borrow on approved collateral security.

When their obligations mature they address themselves quite simply to the duty of payment.

It does not occur to them to accuse their creditor of rapacity and oppression. He holds their promise to pay, on terms to which the debtor has freely assented.

What more is to be said? Indeed what can be said that has any bearing on the matter?

The French cabinet has just voted to a man against paying the United States the $19,000,000 of defaulted war debt interest due last December, unless the United States guarantees a moratorium on the next installment of interest which falls due June 15.

A nation which is a debtor does not scruple even to abuse and threaten its creditor.

Obligated to pay without qualification, it haggles for benefits and concessions for doing what it has already bound itself to do.

Despite the fact that its debt has already been cut in half and interest reduced to a minimum, despite the fact that it has already received every possible consideration for its obligation, it insists on receiving further and additional consideration and protests violently against recognizing its solemn promise to pay either principal or interest on the half of its debt which remains.

A PRIVATE DEBTOR is usually grateful to his creditor. He needed the money he borrowed and was relieved to get it upon terms he was glad to accept.

The debtor nation, however, regards its creditor with anger and resentment.

It rails at him.

It threatens reprisals if the creditor gives the least sign of regarding the promise of the debtor nation as having honorable validity.

The reprisals in the case of France have taken various forms.

The latest is a FIFTEEN PER CENT SURTAX ON ALL AMERICAN PRODUCTS SEEKING ENTRY INTO FRANCE.

He does not scorn the suggestion of security for his loan.

He does not fall back on prime ministers and distinguished naval and army commanders to make orations on "national good faith" and the "integrity of a great people" as substitutes for collateral.

He does not talk, as do the French, of paying in silver, only to reject later even that suggestion, because it involves only a 30 per cent reduction upon the debt already cut in half.

Truly the ways of a debtor nation are NOT the ways of the ordinary debtor.

They will never be classified by history under such headings as integrity or decency or honor or good faith.

The history of France will hereafter have several sub-titles of a very different import.

The reader of tomorrow, who is interested in the story of France's defalcation, will find chapters and foot-notes and cross references devoted to such unlovely topics as, "the strange policy of France with reference to her international debts,"—"The disowning by France of her war debts,"—"France, a shifty debtor,"—"French repudiation,"—"The ingratitude of France to America."

And nothing France can do or say will blot out these dishonorable chapters from the history of her decadence.

NIGHT CLUB MAN'S AUTO DAMAGED

Windows in 4 Shops Shattered by Explosion

A mysterious bomb explosion that rocked the East Liberty district early today was a racketeer warning, detectives said today.

The bomb exploded at Broad street and North Highland avenue, damages the auto of Tom Contis, "Tom the Greek," proprietor of the Ban-Box, and blew out windows in the Dutch Cleaning Company; the hemstitching shop of Miss A. M. Stewart, 5937 Broad street; the Home Renting agency at 5935 Broad street, and the F. J Hanlon plumbing shop at 5938 Broad street.

Contis' automobile, from which police said the hub caps had been blown, was standing on the opposite side of the street from the Ban-Box cabaret.

Contis, political leader in the East End and operator of various enterprises, told Detective Joseph Linden:

"I don't think they intended the bomb for me or my place. It would have been an easy matter to plant a bomb in the hallway of my night club."

The Ban-box was the secene of a testimonial dinner to Capt. Harry Schunk attended by Contis, Public Safety Director; Harmar D. Denny, Jr., Police Superintendent Franklin T. McQuaide, Councilman W. J. Soost and Budget Director Robert J. Alderdice.

The bomb was believed to have exploded in mid-air.

NEW GAIN MADE BY INDUSTRY

Anticipations of a steady forward move by Pittsburgh district industries were heightened today by announcement of a 30 per cent carloading gain in the district for the first week in May, over the same week in April, by the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad.

The same week showed an advance of 6 per cent over last year, with prospects that the entire month of May would jump ahead of May a year ago.

Local business analysts see fundamental improvement in our basic industries, as a result of such far-flung production increases as:

Youngstown — General Fireproofing Company will increase operations next week to 45 per cent of capacity, highest rate in more than a year, as a result of sharp improvement in metal furniture business. Additional work hours will be given to 600 men.

Mother Abused Blind Girl, Sister Testifies

Two daughters, one of them blind, testified in Morals Court today against their mother, Mrs. Sophia Visnic, 47, of 2437 Westmar street.

The younger daughter, Catherine, 9, told Magistrate T. D. Jones that her mother abused Mary, 23, and blind, and that she used the money which Mary obtained by begging for buying liquor.

Mrs. Visnic denied her daughter's charges.

Police testified the three lived in a squalid room, and that when they arrived early today, following reports of trouble, they found the two girls in the street, scantily dressed. The mother was in the room in a stupor, they said.

The mother was fined $10 or 10 days in jail. The daughters were turned over to social workers.

UNEMPLOYMENT OFFENSIVE PLANS GIVEN FINAL CHECK

PROJECT GOES TO CONGRESS NEXT WEEK

Form of Taxes Only Point Remaining To Be Settled

WASHINGTON, May 13.—(AP.)—The administration's carefully-planned offensive against unemployment moved closer to a definite launching today, with industrial leaders being called in for a final check on their part of the joint campaign.

Linking public works construction projects with industrial co-operation, the sweeping program is now virtually complete and will go to Congress early next week barring some unforseen drafting difficulties. President Roosevelt gave his approval yesterday.

The sole point to be settled was said to be the form of new taxes to be levied to raise interest and sinking fund charges on the $3,300,000,000 bond issue for financing the construction work that will give jobs to thousands of idle. A special committee was named by the President to reach an agreement on this today.

The total of new taxes needed was figured at $220,000,000 annually. A general sales tax, a "breakfast tax" on coffee and tea, and increased income levies have been suggested.

TO STUDY PROGRAM

While this was in the process of determination, a delegation of the National Association of Manufacturers planned to examine the industrial co-operation feature of the program this morning. The proposed legislation would permit a relaxation of the anti-trust laws so that industry could reach agreements for stabilizing working conditions and providing more jobs.

These industrial leaders, headed by President Robert L. Lund, of St. Louis, have promised the full co-operation of industry in putting men to work. They have approved and submitted to 56,000 members of the association a plan for re-employing 3,000,000 men on a specified date. This would be supplementary to the administration's encompassing program.

Mr. Roosevelt and Lewis W. Douglas, director of the budget, have decreed that the federal budget must be kept within balance and that costs of financing the $3,300,000,000 bond issue must come from new sources.

BIG RELIEF BILL SIGNED BY F. R.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt yesterday signed the $500,000,000 unemployment relief bill.

In authorizing for the first time the expenditure of federal funds for direct relief the President in a statement emphasized that this did not absolve states and local communities of their responsibilities for relieving distress. He said:

"The bill in effect is a challenge to governors, legislatures and local officials to stimulate their own efforts to provide for for their citizens in need."

Half of the $500,000,000 authorized by Congress will be given to states as outright relief gifts, while the remainder will be distributed on a basis of $1 of government help for every $3 the state spends for relief.

BONDS NEEDED FOR BEER SALE

The forms have been shipped from Harrisburg, but the licenses will not be ready for about a week, according to officials of the F. Englert Lithographing Company, who have been awarded the contract for the licenses by County Commissioners.

Both retailers and distributors seeking licenses must post bond for $1,000 with the County Treasurer. The bond is to insure that the laws are obeyed in places where beer is sold.

The bonds may be underwritten by a surety company or by two individuals, according to A. E. Anke, deputy county treasurer.

NEW GAIN MADE BY INDUSTRY

20 per cent over March, according to President J. D. Tew.

Detroit—Kelvinator Corporation's orders have established a new high daily record each successive day this month.

Boston—Fisk Rubber Corporation is on a day and night schedule, increasing its output more than three times, with orders and shipments heavier than in many years.

In the Pittsburgh area, Follansbee Bros. Company reports its tin plate works at Follansbee, W. Va., is working at 70 per cent of capacity, with the "general outlook brighter."

There is a pronounced tendency on the part of leaders in all industrial fields to agree with the pronouncement that the low point of the depression was the week of March 18, as shown by the index of the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Pittsburgh.

BUILDING GAIN SEEN

That Pittsburgh can expect some progress in building was held out by the City Bureau of Building Permits today. Total permits for either March or April exceeded the combined number for January and February, the records of the bureau show.

This was interpreted to be in line with the findings of the national conference on the Renewal of Home Building, just closed in Chicago. On conservative estimates, it was brought out at the conference, the nation is short 500,000 homes, and vacancies are greatly decreasing.

Inquiries at the local bureau indicate, it was reported, that building conditions are "just about reaching the turning point."

POLICE ACCUSE SALESMAN

Seventy-five policemen and firemen crowded Central Station today to testify against Edward Mason, alias A. W. Vansickle, of 616 Taylor avenue. They were just a part of 99 firemen and 40 policemen, who say they paid 50 cents each to Mason for shoes at bargain prices, and failed to get the shoes.

Detectives John McCullough and John Dean, testified Mason, a former shoe salesman, went into business for himself when he lost his job. He offered a "Policeman's Special" shoe at prices ranging from $1.35 to $4.50, requiring a 50-cent deposit, and did a land office business. A pair of sox went with each pair of shoes.

When the shoes failed to arrive, his victims caused his arrest. To Magistrate Rothenberg, who held Mason for court on a false pretense charge, Mason said he didn't deliver the shoes because no factory could make them at the price. He said he intended to purchase cheap shoes and fill the orders.

FIRMS AWARDED U. S. CONTRACTS

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Contracts amounting to $38,434.60 have been approved for two construction firms of Western Pennsylvania, by Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of Army engineers.

The Midland Barge Company, of Midland, will receive a contract involving the expenditure of $24,600 for furnishing a steel hull, 15-ton whirler derrick boat to Chicago District No. 1, and the Pennsylvania Drilling Company, of Pittsburgh, will receive a $13,834.60 contract for core drilling for lock and dam sites at Chickamauga, White Creek and Sister Island, Tennessee River.

PENNINGTON'S JOB SAFE

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—(AP.)—John D. Pennington, prohibition administrator for Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, and arch foe of racketeers, yesterday was told by Maj. A. V. Dalrymple, national director of prohibition:

"Your job is safe."

Several political leaders in the district, notably in New Jersey, demanded Pennington's removal—some on the ground he was a Republican, and others because he belonged to the "pre-3.2 beer era."

MITCHELL TO GO ON STAND

NEW YORK, May 13.—(Universal.)—Charles E. Mitchell, until recently a collosal figure in the world of banking, will take the stand in his trial for alleged evasion of income taxes and reveal an amazing story of huge losses, it was learned today.

The trial, before Judge Henry W. Goddard in Federal Court, will resume Monday before a carefully picked jury of 12 men.

Mitchell's losses in the collapse of the roaring bull market in 1929 will be bared in connection with his sales of stock which the government contends were "fictitious."

While the facts in the case are simple, the legal battle which will break loose Monday before the "young men's jury" will be a clash of momentous importance. It is a test of the government's crusade against alleged "tax dodging" millionaires.

TULSA TWISTER KILLS FIVE

TULSA, Okla., May 13.—(AP.)—A tornadic storm, twisting about the southeast edge of Tulsa, left five dead and eight known injured.

Nine of the victims last night had taken refuge in one house, a frame structure about seven miles from the city. All of the dead and four injured persons were removed from the wreckage of the house or found nearby where the twister had hurled them.

F. R. REJECTS FRENCH DEBT PROPOSAL

President Won't Ask Authority for Revision

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—President Roosevelt has politely but firmly rejected a French debt proposal whereby the Daladier government would undertake to pay the defaulted December installment of $19,000,000 in exchange for a guaranteed moratorium on the forthcoming June installment of $40,000,000.

The proposal was made by Ambassador de la Boulaye upon instructions from Paris. He discussed it with President Roosevelt and with Secretary of State Hull last night, but got nowhere.

To this government, the French offer represented merely an old proposal dressed up in the same old clothes, with the time element the only new thing about it.

As long ago as last December, when the $19,000,000 was due, the French offered to pay provided the American government would agree that it was to be the last of such payments under the Mellon-Bereneer agreement.

The Hoover administration was unwilling to assent to this, in view of its approaching demise, and also in view of the fact that congressional approval would have been impossible of attainment.

The Roosevelt administration is no more willing to accept it. The new Seventy-third Congress, Democratic in both branches, is as much opposed to it as was the old Seventy-second Congress, torn as it was with factional and partisan strife.

Meanwhile, it was learned that President Roosevelt will make no request to Congress for authority to revise the $11,000,000,000 debts of European nations.

HITLER PLANS COMPROMISE ARMS OFFER

Nazi Chieftain Will Submit Proposal Before Reichstag

Geneva disarmament conference by Dr. Rudolph Nadolny, chief German delegate, would, if continued, lead only to isolation of the Reich. But Nadolny was only carrying out orders whereas Hitler, in his speech next week, will be initiating a new policy, dealing with Germany's claim for arms equality with other European powers.

DAVIS FOR FIRMNESS

LONDON, May 13.—(INS.)—Sponsoring a "fair and just but firm" attitude toward Germany regarding disarmament, Norman H. Davis, special American Ambassador, left London for Paris and Geneva today in an effort to save the disarmament conference from collapse.

Expressing gratification over the action of the world powers in accepting President Roosevelt's tariff truce proposal, Davis made clear he considered settlement of the disarmament crisis the next step toward world recovery.

Davis was asked whether he favored action by the former allied powers against Germany if that nation refuses to accept the British disarmament plan and proceeds to build up her own defenses.

He replied:

"I believe a firm attitude toward Germany is essential.

"But it should be fair and just."

FRANCE, BRITAIN FIRM

PARIS, May 13.—(AP.)—France and Great Britain were united today to face a disquieting situation created by the armament aspirations of Chancellor Hitler, of Germany.

Indications that these countries were ready to send their armies back into the Rhineland if Germany seeks greater armaments than permitted under the Versailles treaty raised the question of whether the United States would be willing to resume its military posts on the Rhine River.

Foreign Minister Paul-Boncour made clear in his statement yesterday that France and Great Britain are ready to return to the sanctions of the Versailles treaty if forced to.

He saw in the speech of Lord Hailsham, British Secretary for War, a vindication of the policy France has been pursuing patiently for months. Lord Hailsham said any re-armament by Germany would bring the treaty sanctions into operation.

Harry Bell, operator of the trolley following the snow plow, was arrested and lodged in Rochester jail on a suspicious person charge.

INJUNCTION SOUGHT

Meanwhile, the railways company, a subsidiary of the Pittsburgh Railways Company, pending opening of the Beaver County courts, when an injunction will be sought to restrain the Borough of Rochester from interference, is operating shuttle cars as far as the last barricade. From this point passengers are transferred to buses.

Former Judge George Baldwin, Rochester borough solicitor, will oppose the company's application for an injunction.

During the past two or three years Council has repeatedly asked the railways company to repave the street between the rails, it was reported. The company says it is unable to do so because of dwindling revenues.

FARM HOLIDAY LEADERS CALL OFF STRIKE

Decide to Give F. R.'s Plan Chance; Milk Battle On

Associated Press.

The farm strike is off—temporarily at least—except for milk strikes in Wisconsin and Northern Illinois.

Reassured by President Roosevelt's statement urging leniency in farm mortgage foreclosures and in other financial claims against the farmers, leaders of the Farmers' Holiday Association, sponsors of the movement, decided to abandon the project before it began.

The decision to postpone any general attempt to withhold foodstuff from the American dinner table for the time being in an effort to win assurance of production costs for the farmer was announced last night from St. Paul.

POSTPONE STRIKE

A minute after midnight was the time set for the strike, but the holiday leaders decided instead to give the Roosevelt administration an "opportunity to fulfill to fulfill pre-election pledges to the farmer."

Gov. Floyd B. Olson, of Minnesota, urged Milo Reno, president of the holiday group, to defer action until the President's farm plans show results.

Reno said officers and directors of the holiday association would meet in Des Moines soon to discuss President Roosevelt's statement and farm program.

Despite the decision, announced by Reno, dairy farmers in Wisconsin and in Northern Illinois decided they would go through with their strike plan.

Wallace Calls Parleys To Put Plan in Action

WASHINGTON, May 13.—(INS.)—The first step in putting into operation the government's gigantic farm relief plan was taken today by Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace.

He summoned processors, producers and handlers of basic commodities, to a series of conferences and thus set in motion a program aimed to bring better prices and adjust production to demand.

The basic commodities—wheat, cotton, corn, hogs, tobacco, rice and dairy products, will be discussed.

ROCHESTER (PA.) POLICE ON COUNCIL ORDERS BLOCKING BEAVER TRACTION CARS . . . STREET PAVING CONTROVERSY

Child Labor Problem Dodged, Martin Says

CORRY, Pa., May 13.—(AP.)—Reiterating that America's "worst racketeers are men and women who deliberately set out to array one class of citizens against another," Gen. Edward Martin, Republican state chairman, last night said:

"No punishment is too severe for those who purposely deceive the public."

Gen. Martin, discussing before a group of service men Pennsylvania labor laws as they apply to women and children, asserted they are "flouted chiefly by newcomers in this state—operators of what is known as the needle industries."

He added the Republican state organization "will do everything within its power to correct bad conditions."

He said that meanwhile police and school authorities are not without power to act, but that unfortunately many communities prefer to "pass the buck" to the state.

He referred to the Gallagher (Allegheny) resolution adopted by the General Assembly, authorizing investigation of labor conditions for women and children, and said the legislative committee will make a thorough study of conditions and report to the next session of the Legislature.

Sewickley M. E. Church Ousts 7 Trustees

Seven of the nine trustees of the Sewickley Methodist Episcopal Church stood voted out of office today following the quarterly conference last night.

A close vote sustained the election of seven new board members, who were elected May 8 at a special congregational meeting reported called by the pastor, the Rev. H. A. Welday.

On the petition of any 10 church members, the pastor may call a congregational meeting to elect new trustees, but it was explained such an occasion was without precedent in the Sewickley Church, one of the borough's oldest congregations.

It was reported the petition was arranged by the Rev. Welday.

It was also reported today that the Rev. Dr. W. S. Trosh, superintendent of the Allegheny district of the Pittsburgh Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has been asked to replace the Rev. Welday. The conference meets next month in Bellevue.

The ousted trustees, some of whom have served in that capacity for the past 50 years, include William Cunningham, A. H. Diehl, Charles Little, J. B. Buzzard, B. J. Lindberg, J. A. Rosensteel and S. I. Fowler. The trustees re-elected were Thomas Taylor and S. C. Bisinger.

The Rev. Welday today said he had been instructed by the district superintendent, Dr. Trosh, not to discuss last night's meeting.

MEANS ENDS WEIRD KIDNAP TALE; HINTS LINDY BABY LIVES

TRIAL RECESSES AFTER GASPING FOR 2 DAYS

Court Crowds Shocked By 'Amazing Story' Of Ex-U. S. Agent

WASHINGTON, May 13.—(AP.)—Gaston B. Means kept his promise and gave what he swears is the "real low-down" on the Lindbergh baby kidnaping mystery.

It was inscribed today in the records of the District of Columbia Supreme Court where for two days sensation-shocked crowds have been held in breathless suspense by one of the most amazing stories ever unfolded.

Means, the secret operative "extraordinary," hunter of Communists, and convicted swindler, brought his narrative to an astounding climax yesterday with the testimony that the body Col. Charles A. Lindbergh identified as his first-born son was in reality a "plant" and not the "real Lindbergh child."

A week-end recess was taken in Means' trial today. He and Norman Whitaker are accused of conspiring to steal $35,000 from Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, distinguished society woman, on the pretext that they could ransom and recover the stolen child of the famous flier.

In his testimony, Means gave the names of kidnapers, how the Lindbergh baby was stolen, where Mrs. McLean's money was hidden and told of a rambling chase over half the country in an effort to recover the tiny victim.

The defendant testified that Wellington Henderson, of Detroit, whom he described as the ringleader of the kidnapers, was the one who told him that the body found near Hopewell was a "plant." That was on May 17, 1932. Means said:

"Henderson told me that the real Lindbergh baby was alive then and in Juarez, Mexico."

Previously Means had named Max Hassel and Max Greenberg, slain beer runners, as the actual engineers of the kidnaping.

NAME DEMPSEY IN RACKET DEAL

NEWARK, N. J., May 13.—(AP.)—The name of Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, has been mentioned in connection with proceedings to revoke the beer permit of the Harrison Beverage Company.

Dempsey was named as the man who introduced a Richmand (Va.) friend to sources that arranged a meeting for him with Max Greenberg, beer baron since dead, one of the owners of the Harrison brewery.

Walter Kirsh, of Richmond, a former business partner of Dempsey, brought the ex-pugilist's name into the proceedings in an affidavit, but in New York Dempsey vehemently denied the charge.

Boy Slips Into River From Rock; Drowned

River police today were dragging the Ohio River near the foot of Westhall street, Wood Run, for the body of Anthony Pilatic, 12, of 2913 Preble avenue, who slipped and fell into the stream while playing on a rock on the bank late yesterday.

The swift current dragged Anthony below the surface before his companions could summon aid. A sixth grade pupil of Woods Run School, he was one of five children of Mr. and Mrs. John Pilatic.

BLAST INJURING 36 LAID TO GAS THIEVES

Police Investigation Reveals Main 'Tapped'

The explosion that wrecked a three-story tenement at 1413-15 Clark street, injured 36 persons and shattered windows of neighboring buildings yesterday afternoon, was blamed today by Center Avenue police on gas thieves.

Capt. John H. Schnurr announced after an investigation that a gas line in the house had been connected without taking the fuel through the meter. The pipe was crudely connected and permitted gas to escape, Schnurr said.

Thirty-three of the injured were Negroes. Eighteen victims were taken to Passavant Hospital. Six were kept for further treatment.

The condition of four of the 18 taken to Mercy Hospital, was regarded as serious.

Deputy Chief Frank Jones estimated the damage at $25,000.

Three of the victims, Floyd Williams, 43, and William Gassney, of the Clark street address, and Minnie William, 27, of 1237 Pasture street, were ordered held for questioning, police said.

GIRL KIDNAPING PLOT FOILED

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., May 13.—(AP.)—What authorities believed to be an attempt to kidnap Betty Jean Curtis, 14-year-old daughter of Arthur M. Curtis, state Republican chairman, was thwarted yesterday by alertness of Cora B. Ott, assistant principal of Senior High School here.

Betty Jean, a pretty sophomore, was called from class to the telephone in the assistant principal's office. A woman's low voice told her, she said, that her mother had been injured in an automobile accident and asked her to go at once to St. John's Hospital. Miss Ott insisted that someone go with her, and she and a chum made the trip to the nearby hospital in a taxicab.

Mrs. Curtis was not at the hospital.

The child's father was summoned, and Mrs. Curtis was found attending a play at Drury College, where a son attends.

CHINESE FLEE TO PEIPING

PEIPING, May 13.—(INS.)—Chinese defense troops were in full flight toward Peiping today, routed by the Japanese-Manchukuo avalanche from the North.

The Chinese troops, who had been stationed north of Miyun, retreated in confusion after a 24-hour battle as enemy planes rained bombs on Miyun and Shihhsia.

Reports from Tangku said a Japanese aircraft carrier had arrived at the mouth of the Pai River near there, and that half a dozen Japanese planes had taken off from the ship to reconnoitre the Chinese battle lines.

Military officials here asserted Japanese planes had bombed many Chinese towns and villages north of Peiping. Elaborate precautions were taken here in the event of a bombing attack on Peiping, where many Americans and British citizens reside.

Doctors Bring 2 Back From Land Of Lost Memory

Back from the "port of missing men," that state of lost identity known to doctors of science and medicine as amnesia, two patients at the city hospital, Mayview, were rejoicing today.

Both "found" themselves with the help of Dr. J. S. Hammers, superintendent, and Dr. James McLain, specialist on amnesia cases. One is Albert Totaro, 47, of 243 Carver street, his mind a blank for seven years. The other is Robert Martin of Baltimore, found by police sitting in the Pennsylvania Railroad station here last month.

Dr. McLain explained his method of helping the patient to help himself, saying:

"These men 'crack' under some great mental strain. Their sub-conscious mind takes the place of their over-worked conscious mind and, little by little, we get it back to normal by identifying their normal lapses and encouraging them."

Totaro's case, in the return of memory after such a long time, is a rare one, according to psychiatrists. He was identified through a priest, whose church he recognized in a neighborhood he had spoken of in a momentary return to normal mentality.

The Rev. Father Sigismondi Rosati, pastor of the Help of Christians Church, recalled the name of Totaro's brother, who was brought face to face with the victim. Recognition was mutual. Totaro will leave the hospital within the next two weeks.

Young Wife Murdered In Ohio

XENIA, O., May 13.—(AP.)—Richly gowned in black satin, the body of an apparently well-to-do young married woman lay in the morgue today, mute evidence of a mysterious killing.

A bullet wound in her left eye and a bullet lodged in her brain gave police the evidence that led them to conclude she had been killed and dropped from a bridge into the Little Miami River. There her body was found by three small boys braving the chilly waters for an early spring swim.

She could not, said Coroner R. L. Haines, have fired the bullet herself.

No clue to her identity was found.

The woman was about 26 years old. She wore engagement and wedding rings and other jewelry. Her silk hose was rolled to the ankles. Her shoes were missing.

Volcano in Alaska Reported Erupting

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, May 13.—(AP.)—Reports that an unnamed peak west of Tyonek, an apparently long extinct volcanic crater, is throwing out smoke as an apparent outgrowth of the heavy earthquake two weeks ago, reached here today with the arrival of the motorship Discoverer.

Mt. Illiamna, which had been smoking in three places shortly after the earth shocks, however, has subsided, Capt. Berger reported.

3 Volpe Brothers Arrested; Give Bond

Three of the four remaining Volpe brothers, Maillie, Louis and Joseph, today again were at odds with the law.

They were arrested late yesterday charged with surety of the peace on complaint of Louis Lucarelli, West Wilmerding tinsmith, who accused them of attempting to use his shop at 109 Kline avenue as a storage house for liquor. Each posted $500 bond, pending hearings Tuesday before Justice of the Peace Bernard Volk, of Versailles Township.

TRIANGLE CASE PASTOR AVOIDS CHURCH TRIAL

Resignation of Cleric Whose Wife Sheltered Girl Accepted

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., May 13.—(AP.)—Because of his record as a community leader, the Rev. Sharon C. Inman, 35, has escaped a church trial on presbytery charges of "gross immorality and conduct unbecoming a minister."

His resignation as a minister of the Presbyterian Church, submitted by letter, was accepted last night by Ozark Presbytery, called in session to hear charges resulting from Inman's recent desertion of his wife, two children and his church for Miss Ezia (Pat) Holdridge, 20-year-old blonde.

Inman's resignation was accepted a few hours after his wife had been granted a divorce.

In an announced effort to break up the affair between her husband and Miss Holdridge, Mrs. Inman invited the girl to live with the Inman family. She was there a month. Then Mrs. Inman took the pair in a motorcar to a highway near Springfield, and they started walking west.

MOB IN GEORGIA LYNCHES MAN

WARRENTON, Ga., May 13.—(AP.)—A mob abducted a wounded Negro last night after a gun battle in which his brother and a white planter were killed and early today his body was found at a roadside just outside the city.

The Negroes, Lamar Kinsey and Will Kinsey, were tenants of the planter, Charlie English, and the fight took place at their home.

Sheriff George P. Hogan said he learned the battle occurred when the planter went to question them about trouble with his nephew, English and Lamar Kinsey were killed instantly in an exchange of shots.

Will Kinsey, wounded, was brought here by relatives. Dr. W. A. Davis said he treated him in his office and left him with a deputy sheriff. Later J. A. Bray, a druggist, said he saw a mob enter the physician's office, bring Kinsey out, shove him into an automobile, and drive off.

WORK IN FILMS JOAN'S SOLACE

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—(INS.)—Joan Crawford, beautiful young film star, found solace in her motion picture work today.

She divorced Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., the young film player, yesterday on grounds of "grievous mental cruelty."

Fairbanks did not contest the suit. A property settlement had been effected outside of court.

During the trial no mention was made of the $50,000 alienation of affections suit against young Fairbanks by Jorgen Dietz, young Danish chemist, who accused Fairbanks of stealing the love of Dietz's divorced wife, Solveig Dietz.

Tiny, Prize Winning Dog To Rest in Hall of Fame

Somewhere in Uncle Sam's special delivery mail today, packed in dry ice in a small box, is the body of Champion Lady Clio of Arr, 11-year-old Maltese prize-winning dog. Its destination is the Hall of Fame in the Peabody Museum at Yale University, in New Haven, Conn.

Champion Lady Clio of Arr, for which the owner, Mrs. James Gardiner Rossman, of Library road, once refused $10,000, died Thursday from acute indigestion.

It was regarded as the finest specimen of Maltese in the world, and it is on its way to immortality in Dogdom because the Hall of Fame a few years ago requested that its body be given to it for preservation. It was rated the standard of its breed by the American Kennel Club and was never beaten in the show ring.

A telephone call from the Peabody Museum yesterday requested that the body be sent with all possible speed, and it was on its way before nightfall.

The dog was last shown here at the Sewickley bench show last summer.

Lady Clio of Arr stood only five inches high and weighed less than five pounds. Its fine coat measured 28 inches.

What Are You Going To Do About It?

More and more each day the public learns about racketeers—and the public amazement increases daily.

Not only are legitimate lines of business infested by these piratical gentry. Not only are working men victimized and oppressed by fake labor organizations. Rackets reach even deeper than that into American life.

Racketeers prowl in the very halls of justice, and interfere with the orderly processes of law on which every good citizen must depend for the safety of his property and his life.

For example—the "proxy defendant" racket has come to light. Its unimportant minions are engaged in the business of going to jail for bootleggers caught racketeering under the prohibition law. And federal attorneys in New York have learned that these "dummy prisoners" may be hired any time—by bootleggers or others—through a legal bonding agency, which pays vagrant "odd job men" five or ten dollars a day to serve short jail terms in place of the real culprits.

This racket is so well organized that the federal men say even ethical lawyers have been approached with offers to furnish substitute defendants who will "take the rap" for their clients.

So it goes—rackets within rackets, all contending against law and order.

Small wonder that the public is astonished. But something more than astonishment is called for.

Public indignation should demand that ALL RACKETS be relentlessly suppressed, wherever they may may be found.

The war on rackets is YOUR business just as much as it is anybody else's business.

What are you going to do about it?

CHURCH SERVICES TO HONOR MOTHERS TOMORROW

25TH NATIONAL CELEBRATION TO BE HELD

Pittsburgh churches will participate tomorrow in the Twenty-fifth nationwide observance of Mother's Day. The origination of Mother's Day is credited to Miss Anna Jarvis, of Philadelphia. Her mother died in 1906. With untiring effort she wrote thousands of letters to influential people in all walks of life and interviewed many public men.

Mr. McNaugher

As a result of her efforts Philadelphia observed Mother's Day in May, 1908. Since 1912, the governor of Texas has pardoned a number of prisoners every Mother's Day. In May, 1913, Pennsylvania made it a state holiday and the same year a resolution passed the Senate and House of Representatives to make the second Sunday in May a national holiday, "dedicated to the memory of the best mother in the world, your mother."

EXTENDS EFFORTS

Miss Jarvis then extended her efforts internationally. Mother's Day was observed in England as early as 1913. The badge of the day is a white carnation.

Judge McNaugher will speak at the annual Mother's Day service in the Seventh United Presbyterian Church, Forty-fourth street, tomorrow morning. Mother and motherhood will be honored at the Epiphany Church at 11 a. m. tomorrow with approximately 175 persons participating in the ceremony. The Rev. Eugene Harkins will be celebrant at solemn high mass with the Rev. James P. Harvey, deacon, and the Rev. Leo G. Fallon, sub-deacon. The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Law A. O'Connell.

VOLUNTEERS' SERVICE

Adj. Myrta Butler, of Syracuse, N. Y., will be framed as a living picture in memory of everybody's mother at the Volunteers of America service at 8 p. m. tomorrow. The Rev. C. E. Flickinger will give a Mother's Day message. Mothers and babies will attend a Cradle Roll meeting at 2:30 p. m.

The Dames of Malta will attend a Mother's Day vesper service in the Messiah Lutheran Church, of Homestead, at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow. The Womens' Corps of the Salvation Army will conduct a service of song and music at 8 p. m. tomorrow at 425 Second avenue.

200 PILGRIMS ON COX TRIP

More than 200 Pittsburghers will make the Father Cox pilgrimage to the Shrine of the Little Flower, Royal Oak, Mich., on a special train, leaving the Pennsylvania Station at midnight tonight, daylight savings time.

The pilgrimage will meet Father Charles J. Coughlin, radio priest.

Sight-seeing in Detroit is planned for the afternoon. Father Cox is making a special rate for the round trip, which includes meals and all other essentials. Out of this sum he makes a profit for his unemployment relief fund.

The party will leave Detroit late tomorrow night and be in Pittsburgh early Monday morning.

Father Cox has had another big week in his Sun-Telegraph drive for subscriptions and today he gets his usual Saturday check from this newspaper. Every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page or is telephoned in with the request that Father Cox be given credit for it, brings to his unemployment relief fund a liberal cash commission.

Orpheus Choir Asks For More Singers

A call for new voices is issued by the Orpheus Choir, of Pittsburgh, according to John M. Ferguson, director. Rehearsals will be conducted during June and July for engagements during the coming season.

Masons to Attend Vesper Services

Members of the Masonic lodges of the North Boroughs tomorrow will listen to the Rev. Herbert B. Hudnut, of the Bellevue Presbyterian Church, talk on "Christian Co-operation," at the vesper service at 4:45 p. m. Prior to the vesper service there will be a short meeting at Masonic Hall in Bellevue.

The Story of Queen Esther -:- CHAPTER III -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

King Xerxes, having banished his wife for disobedience, issued a proclamation commanding that the fairest girls of the realm be brought to his palace so that he might choose from among them a new bride.

Many maidens were assembled from far and wide, as Xerxes had ordered. Among them was a beautiful young Jewish girl, Esther, the niece of a palace servant, Mordecai, who was a captive from Jerusalem.

Mordecai had urged Esther not to reveal her identity or her Jewish blood. She kept them secret, as he requested, while every day her uncle strolled in the court of the women's quarters to see how she fared.

At last there came the day when it was Esther's turn to be shown to King Xerxes. She was anointed and perfumed and attended by handmaidens who dressed her richly and did everything to make her lovely.

OPEN MISSION CONVENTION

The Woman's Missionary Convention of the Methodist Protestant Church, began its annual meeting yesterday in the First Methodist Protestant Church, Aiken avenue and Howe street, and will continue until Monday.

MY OWN LIFE STORY — By Evelyn Nesbit Thaw

Hated Thaw, Never Told Him Anything Else, Says Evelyn

SYNOPSIS

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, having told of her love for Stanford White, her pursuit by Harry Thaw, and her trip to Europe with Thaw, today continues her story to the point where she returned to New York full of hatred for the man she was destined to marry. Evelyn emphasizes throughout the series the lesson her life has taught her—that wrong is never right and can never end happily.

CHAPTER IX.

With my mother safely out of the way, and under the pretense of taking me to see all Europe's capitals—with a chaperon—Harry Thaw next took me on the journey which ended at Schloss Katzenstein.

I have already told of the happenings in that beautiful old castle——after Harry happened to lose our chaperon.

I learned many things about Harry Thaw at Schloss Katzenstein—entirely apart from his mad craving to beat me with a dog whip.

I have told about the horror of those mountain nights, but I have not told of my desperation in realizing that I was absolutely unable to get away from that frantic man.

For one whole week I lay in my bed suffering torment and weeping bitterly. My heart was broken. But Thaw, in spite of my helpless condition, watched me as a cat watches a mouse.

"You can't get away—you impudent girl," he taunted.

Had I been a little older, a little more experienced, I would have gone directly to the U. S. consul and asked for help—but I couldn't have got away even for that.

Thaw's Prisoner

There was no way of getting down that mountain without Thaw's knowing it. He sat staring into space, biting his nails, all that week. I couldn't speak. I couldn't answer him when he spoke.

I really needed a doctor's care. It took time for my body to heal. Days went by. Weeks. Thaw was afraid, I guess, to take me away from the castle as long as there were any telltale marks on me. By this time I was so thoroughly afraid of him, so terrified at the least sign of anger on his part, that I was afraid to open my mouth to say a word. My eyes were red and swollen from constant weeping, and I was a complete wreck.

Finally, to my relief, we left the Schloss Katzenstein and traveled by landau over the mountain range. I saw nothing but blurred images through tear-filled eyes.

How I hated Harry Thaw! I detested him. But as truly as the girl at Mrs. DeMille's school said, "Doggone it, something is always happening to Evelyn," I couldn't control my fate. Fate dictated that I should follow my tormentor, and follow him I did. Didn't I marry him later?

My condition worried him. He was truly frightened. He never left me alone for a fraction of a second.

Weeks later we returned to Paris, but all the gaiety—that carefree lightheartedness of early youth—was gone. Thaw did everything in the world to amuse me, kept up a steady round of lunches, dinners, theaters, suppers, parties; drives in the Bois de Boulogne, trips to the romantic Robinson's, where we dined in the trees.

Robinson's is a delightful spot, and it appealed to me in spite of my depressed spirits. Steps are built around the trunk of a lovely elm tree. The steps lead up to a platform in the lower branches, where platforms hold tables and chairs.

Evelyn's Hatred

I want my readers to get this straight:

I gave Harry Thaw no reason to believe anything but the truth—that I loathed him. He never got a word or gesture of affection from me, because it wasn't there.

But he kept trying, extravaganly, to win my favor, in spite of his smoldering resentment—and his declarations that he could never marry me—after what Stanford White had done to me.

But then, of course, Thaw was "fou."

Anything I wanted in the shops was mine for the asking. Thaw even had diamond buckles made for my black satin evening slippers. I tried hard to be happy again, but it just couldn't be done. Something had gone out of my heart, out of my mind.

I was saddened and subdued—but here is a curious thing—I actually began to feel sorry for Thaw!

For the first time in my life I began to think about his background. I knew that he had been turned loose in Europe while still under 20, with unlimited amounts of money. He had never known restraint.

I also knew that he was very much in love with me and insanely jealous of me.

Famous Friends

It was about this time that Thaw tried to impress me with the respectability of his acquaintances. He went to see Elizabeth Marbury and Elsie de Wolfe, and took me with him. At this time these two famous women were living in Paris in the apartment of Emma Calve, the opera singer.

I found out later that he was trying to get Miss Marbury to advise me to marry him. Here, in mock innocence, he insisted on a chaperone for me.

So far had he changed from the Katzenstein affair that if I got so much as a pain in my little finger he would summon a dozen doctors.

If I ate too many cakes and sweets—as I often did—and got a pain in my tummy, he would call the first doctor he could think of and say:

"Come quick. Come at once—the angel has a pain!"

"The angel," that was always I.

Picture this sort of scene:

I would be sitting in the main salon of Doucet, the famous modeste, in the Rue de la Paix, and Thaw would get on his knees in a most supplicating attitude, looking at me like an adoring poodle, and say:

"Is the angel tired? Is the angel thirsty? Does her want a drink of water? Is her comfortable?"

The attendants, saleswomen and fitters naturally giggled. Sometimes they ran from the room and I could hear them going into gales of laughter outside. These episodes embarrassed me terribly, as anyone might imagine.

All this time I was worrying about my mother. I had left her in a huff. I hadn't received a letter from her. But according to Thaw, she had gone safely home to New York and was living there with everything she needed.

Thaw began to yearn for New York. To say that I felt the same way would be putting it mildly. So when Thaw found that Miss Marbury and Miss de Wolfe were sailing on the S. S. New York, he told me to go with them. He would follow in a few weeks with Bedford, his valet.

When I reached New York I found my mother had gone to Pittsburgh. I couldn't find out anything else about her.

If I had—if I could have learned what had actually happened to my mother in London, my eyes would have been opened to a great deal of Thaw's undercover work, his scheming and plotting.

A Warning

Through Miss Marbury on the boat, I had met Haddon Chambers, the English playwright. I dined with him the first night we were in New York. We went to the theater, then to supper at Rector's.

He was amusing, a very interesting man, and I enjoyed this sudden freedom.

Chambers asked me a great many questions about Thaw, and I gathered from what he said he thought I was making a mistake in being seen with Thaw so much.

"Are you going to marry him?" Chambers asked. "Do you mind telling me that?"

"Good heavens, no" I answered.

"Then don't be seen with him," Chambers told me. "It won't do you any good."

I had been in New York only a few days when I became deluged with invitations. During the few moments I had to myself I determined to break away from Thaw and everything connected with him. Miss Marbury had asked me to come and see her, and I was really impolite and ungrateful in not doing so, but because she knew Thaw I didn't go near her. I forgot that Miss Marbury, a famous intellectual, knew all sorts of people.

If only I had had sense enough to go to her and tell the truth about everything—not only the truth about Stanford White, but my experiences with Thaw also—that brilliant woman would have advised me, set me straight and helped me solve the problem of my life.

But I had determined to break away from Thaw, and Miss Marbury was a link in the past. I didn't see her.

White Calls

One night, while I was resting in my hotel room, there came an old familiar scratching on my door—and Stanford White appeared.

I don't know what he thought.

There I was in a beautiful suite of rooms on the Fifth avenue side of the hotel. I was in a gorgeous Rue de la Paix outfit, with Tiffany brooches glittering on my evening gown.

Whatever he thought, he simply walked into the room, took one look at me and drew me to him.

"Kittens," he said, shaking his head sadly. "Kittens, where have you been all this time? What have you been doing? You wrote only one letter to me."

That was true. I had written to him from Boulogne-sur-Mer—the only opportunity I had.

"I had a terrible time with your mother," Stanford said. "Terrible. She didn't want to believe the story and I told her it wasn't true. I finally persuaded her that the whole thing was a scheme on Thaw's part to make trouble for me."

That was the end of that conversation.

I loved him. Such a love never dies completely. It is there today. I have never experienced that same emotion a second time, although I have often imagined myself head over heels in love.

This first girlhood thrill probably was the cause, more than anything else, of the endless conflict between Thaw and me. I don't know.

Anyway, Thaw was soon back. He came back with all his eccentricities and bad habits, all his despicable temper.

He came back—this time—to finish weaving the web of terror about me—to lead me to marriage as the life partner of a being hopelessly strangled with jealousy toward the man I really loved. Evelyn Nesbit was soon to become Mrs. Harry Thaw, in spite of herself.

Globe-Trotting

With the Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Yesterday Aircaster said that crime stories amounting to lessons in crime should be banned from the air. Before that he commented on a kidnaping story that was matched, almost detail by detail, by the Massachusetts kidnapers.

He might have voiced the complaint of many mothers to ghost stories and other eerie offerings that forcefully attract the children and then disturb their rest by disquieting thoughts of supernatural demons hovering about them.

More important in children's programs is the choice of dialogue. Sometimes the youthful hero of the radio skit employs expressions of common grammatical errors. That may be realism but disturbing to the parent whose child listens and then uses it.

Edmund Szymonsky had a fitting exhibit for Ripley's Odditorium but it wouldn't keep. He sends a snapshot of the hail stones that bombarded Bellevernon during the May 9 storm. The measuring stick, also pictured, shows the stones to be more than two inches in diameter.

Did you hear about the new resident of Arnold? One of those startled fawns we have heard so much about, visited the home of Mrs. Grant Kilgore. This brown and white specimen was the size of a police dog.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair
–With–
Patricia Pitt

"Was wilst du haben" will be the theme song at a German beer garden one evening next month right here in Pittsburgh with all the patrons belonging to our smart set. And no matter what they ask for, as at the recent Architectural Club soirees charettes, they'll be served beer and pretzels.

The garden will be open for one evening, that of June 3, at Sander's Inn with the University Medical Center Aid Society sponsoring the affair—a benefit, of course. It's to be a supper-dance, by the way.

All the committee members, born in Pittsburgh, will become maedchens for the evening, appearing in German peasant costumes. The society will give a floor show of its own, too, in addition to the show offered by Sander's.

Maedchen Uniformed

General chairman for this exciting evening is Virginia Frew Wright, the young president. And Mrs. Roberdeau Green Annan is her co-chairman.

Mrs. James McKay is chairman of entertainment, aided by Mrs. Raymond Ford Moreland, Evelyn Evans, Mrs. Frederick Gwinner III, and Mrs. John McKelvy.

In charge of tickets are Mrs. W. McCook Reed and Catherine Suydam. Louise Reed is chairman of publicity.

Now for the floor show. Mrs. James McKay will do a Viennese waltz, and Mrs. McKay, Evelyn Evans and Mrs. Frederick Gwinner III and Mrs. Marjorie Dalzell Smith will give a little German dance. Three of the husbands of members will give a specialty dance—Leonard S. Mudge, George Wyckoff and Scott Burke.

Society In Show

* * *

This incessant rain makes us all yearn to travel far away to sunshiny lands. And a few Pittsburghers are going to do just that.

Mrs. William Larimer Mellon and her daughter, Mrs. John F. Walton, will sail tonight on the Europa for Europe.

* * *

Today sophomores of Pennsylvania College for Women will entertain the seniors at a bridge luncheon in the College Club. Virginia Watkins is chairman of arrangements, assisted by Helen Wilson, Katherine Dangerfield, Mary Katherine Rodgers and Jean Engel.

Honor Seniors

Tomorrow night, Mrs. William Gilmore will talk to the students during the vesper hour at the college, and the same night the College Glee Club will sing in the South Avenue Methodist Church, Wilkinsburg.

Wednesday there is to be a baseball tournament at the college, beginning at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and the night of May 20, there will be dances in both Berry and Woodland halls.

Rose Hollingsworth is the new senior class president; Jean Engel, of the junior class, and Jane Griffith, of Wallingford street, of the sophomores.

Gossipy Chat

By NANCY JANE

A fan, a fan—her kingdom for a fan, is what Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby is offering. But the trouble is, it must be a feather fan, and she can't find one in Pittsburgh stores or in the attics of her friends, who's given all their feather fans long since to rummage sales.

Mrs. Jacoby's role as leading lady in the Stage and Play Society's production May 23, of A. A. Milne's "To Have the Honor" calls for a feather fan. She's even written to New York, but is still without a feather fan.

* * *

Harold Geoghegan, another amateur actor to appear in "To Have the Honor," always types his lines out on small pieces of paper, and carries them about in the palm of his hand.

At odd moments at rehearsal the other day, he was pacing up and down, muttering the lines to himself.

WASHABLE MATERIALS PROVE IDEAL FOR SPECTATOR SPORTS

THIS YEAR materials that may be easily laundered are all the mode. As a result, quantities of fascinating fabrics have been developed. The new cottons and linens are a joy to behold and feel; and this spring you have a wide scope from which to choose your frocks for sports both active and passive.

* * *

THE DRESS at the right is of pre-shrunk linen in that string color we have been talking so much about. This has a very faint plaid in a slightly darker shade. The jacket blouse has an amusing belt and buttons of real hemp string in its natural shade. The plain skirt flares a trifle, which gives one freedom of movement for walking or golf. All kinds of string bracelets are being brought forth this spring and they will tie up nicely with the hemp belts and cord caps and all the silly little crochet bits that we call headgear!

* * *

THE LADY seated on the fence wears a fine candy-striped red and white washable silk jersey. Although this material is soft, it tailors beautifully and holds its shape through washings and washings. The dress is short sleeved and the long sleeved jacket carries out the same yoke effect as is used on the frock. Both these necklines are high, which is one sure way of recognizing this year's fashions. This is a great boon to those who want to keep free from sunburn. The great big hat is made of wide wale pique. This ensemble is typically for spectator sports, decorative and very flattering. These dresses lend themselves admirably to country club and suburban life.

TELL IT TO ELSIE

Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Don't Expect All People To Agree With You

What do you do when you "can't get along with" people?

Do you take it as a Personal Insult because they're not cut to your own private measure, and start out to show 'em how wrong they are—and then feel abused because folks won't sympathize with you?

Plainly, that's what Kitty's been doing. And now—

Dear Elsie Robinson:

Will you please help me? I have got to the point where living isn't any fun at all, and I seem to need sympathy or something. No one else seems to have any for me, so I am turning to you. You help so many people that I thought maybe you could help me.

I am 18. I am pretty—or at least a great many people say I am, although I really don't believe so myself. But in spite of that, I just can't seem to get along with folks or have a lot of friends, like other people have, and I just can't understand it.

Not long ago I joined a club. It isn't a club just for young people, but it is a sort of study club, and we give entertainments once a month. I started right in to work hard to help make things go, but it just didn't seem to be appreciated. People didn't like the way I do things, it seems, and were always insisting on doing them some other way. They were always correcting me about this and that, and when I tried to show them that I was really right, they acted like I was just no good.

WANTS APPRECIATION

There are two or three people in this club that I just can't stand, particularly one girl, but people seem to take her part against me. I just think it is simply insulting the way they act toward me, and the way they take it when I try to defend myself. I have quit speaking to her because she acted so "smart"—and now several members of the club, who have a stand-in with her, are giving me the cold shoulder.

Will you please help me and tell me how I can make them appreciate me? My mother died three years ago, and I keep house for Dad and my younger sister. I know that they love me, but sometimes I feel that I just don't belong anywhere.

Lately the other members of the club have raised a terrible row because I won't speak to this girl I don't like. They have even accused me of "trying to break up the club." Why are people so mean to me? Why do I have to associate with a girl I detest—or be picked at? I am miserable! KITTY.

Why are people "so mean to you," Kitty.

It's a 99 to 100 shot they're not, youngster.

From the evidence submitted, you're the one who is "so mean," and the other girls are probably quite as indignant at your snootiness and conceit as you are at their supposed malice.

EXPECTS TOO MUCH

"Snooty? Conceit?" Those two words surprise you, don't they? But look your own letter over. Look at the high estimate you put on all your own notions, and how sulky and sullen you get when they are rejected. But why should your way always be the right way? And why must you be permitted to run the show always—or else you won't play?

Yet that is exactly what you have been doing. You haven't been willing to do Team Work. You've insisted on a One Woman Show—and you can't get away with it! No one can.

So, honey, look yourself over.

Stop expecting everyone to agree with you. Stop feeling injured when people don't hand you all the wreaths. Get in and be one of the crowd, and take them as they come.

Don't expect everyone to like you.

Don't expect to like everyone.

You'll have to work on many a program you won't like, youngster. That isn't a Crool Fate; it's just life—and life is one game you can't lick, Kitty. So you'd better decide pronto to play ball!

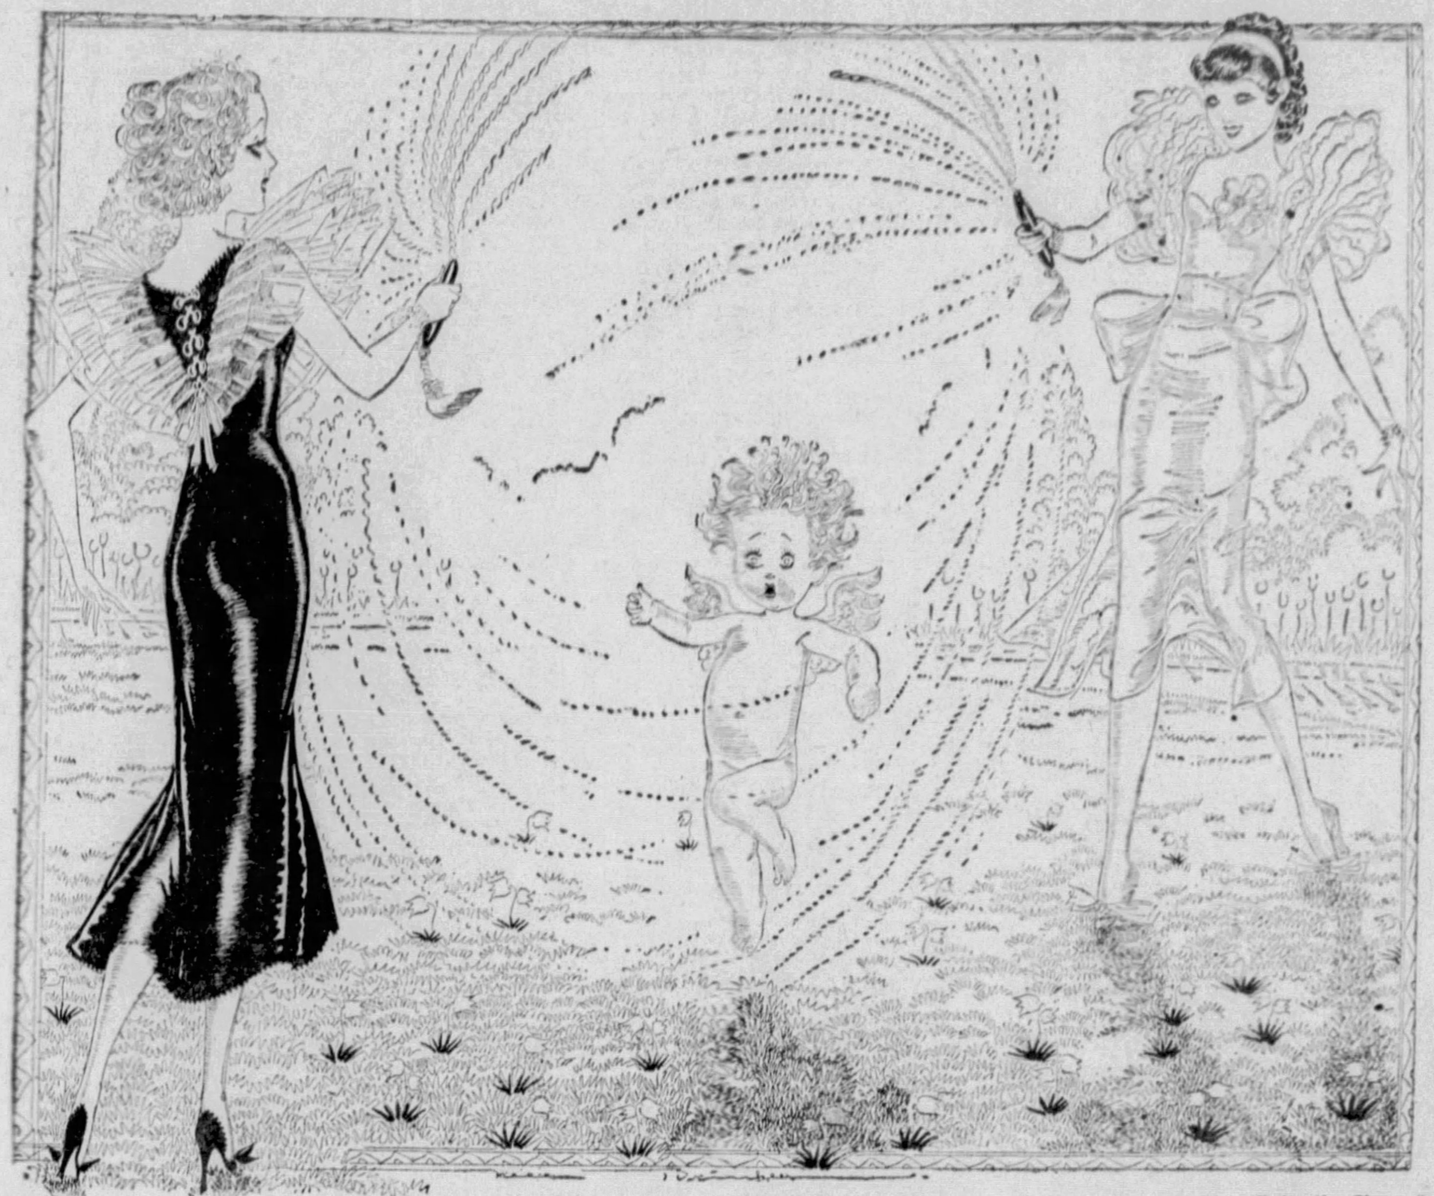
A FOOLISH YOUNG MAN

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



A foolish young man, to play with Sirens! There have been riders, falling stars for swiftness, "O'Ruddys" for boasting, who have said no lasso ever woven could catch their Star-Bright-horse's heels. There have been oceans of men, young and old, who have chuckled and hooked a thumb in at least an imaginary and mythical vest, if the boaster be too high-mannered to hook thumbs in a real one, at the very idea of themselves, lady-slayers as they are, ever being entangled and laid prone by the liveliest and loveliest in History or out. They have all preened themselves too soon. For—

Some sweet day, no different than any other day—to warn them—a lanky young man with gray trousers on his parentheses-shaped legs, a ten-gallon hat, and a violet silk handkerchee around his long, ruddy neck, swirls a mean and humming loop and catches the best rider in the West on the lightningest pair of heels a-gallop. And some fair day a lady lays a trap—with eyes blinking sweetly and a bewildering smile making her mouth three-cornered—and then goes away to hide behind a violet, while the most woman-proof gentleman in the world today gets himself caught in it.

"All men are alike to us!" sing the Sirens, "and Love is a boy. So let us ask him to play with us. We have a pretty yellow rope with ebony handles, that should draw his blue eye—for Love is fond of beauty. We will let him skip gently at first—and then we will wind up! Salt, vinegar, mustard, pepper! 'Til his yellow locks are on end and his eye is wild. And then when he is fallen exhausted we will truss him up like a bright bird in a net—and put him in a gold cage!"

* * *

There HAVE been women—and plain ones, too—who have gotten the best of Love.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

A Number of Things

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When eating a lettuce salad that contains pieces of the firm head, is it correct to cut the lettuce with a knife?

2—When the napkin is placed to the left of the plate, should the outside corner be turned toward the plate or away from it?

3—If a lace tablecloth is used, is it ever permissable to use a colored silk or linen cloth underneath the lace cloth?

4—Should a married woman introduce her unmarried sister or brother by the whole name, as Mary Smith or John Smith; just the first name, as "My sister, Mary" or "My brother, John," or only the last name, as "Miss Smith" or "Mr. Smith"? DOT.

1—It is always correct to use a knife as well as a fork when we eat salad, whether of the simplest kind or complicated. And that's good news, isn't it? As a matter of fact, most of the manufacturers of sterling silver and of plate offer salad knives, and it's foolish not to use them when we need them. Don't you agree?

2—The corners of the napkin should be turned toward the plate. That leaves the folded edge away from the plate, to form on that side the "frame" for the individual setting.

3—It is permissable to use a silk or linen cloth underneath the lace tablecloth, but I think that it is far lovelier and more effective to see the color of the wood. It sets off the lace.

4—Usually when we introduce a member of the family we say only "my sister" or "my brother." But if we wish to give the name and are making the introduction to a close friend, we may add the first name: "Miss Jones, this is my sister Mary." If we especially wish to register the last name, we may say: "This is my sister, Miss Smith," or "This is my sister, Miss Mary Smith."

To Give or Not to Give

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am giving a luncheon for a friend who is to be a bride in the near future. Is it correct for the hostess to give the bride-to-be a gift? T.

It is not necessary, but if you especially wish to give her a gift at this time, there is no reason why you shouldn't. But neither is there any other reason why you should.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Chance for Game

Whenever the auction has been completed and the Opening lead made, the wise Declarer, of course, makes a plan of campaign, takes stock of his resources and determines whether or not his available tricks are sufficient to make possible the contract. Sometimes these resources will prove sufficient to fulfill the contract only if adverse honors are in certain favorable situations. That was the case with the hand below:

North, Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ A Q 8 ♡ Q 4 2 ◇ K 7 5 2 ♣ J 8 4
♠ K 6 3 2 ♡ 9 8 7 ◇ A J ♣ A 10 7 5	North West East South	♠ 7 5 ♡ 6 5 ◇ Q 9 8 6 4 ♣ K 9 6 2
	♠ J 10 9 4 ♡ A K J 10 3 ◇ 10 3 ♣ Q 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
		1 N.T.	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding requires no particular comment. The balanced distribution of the North hand suggests caution, but still the hand has an honor-trick content that appears to justify giving South one more chance to try for game in case his Regulator Takeout is of the maximum rather than the minimum type.

When the cards went down, South could see that if he was to realize his contract, West must hold the Ace of diamonds and the King of spades. West's Opening lead was the heart 9, and this gave color to the belief that he had some type of tenace holding or at least holdings from which a lead would prove undesirable in the other suits. Probably the club honors were divided, but this was a matter of little moment to South if the opponents led that suit. The vital cards, so far as South was concerned, were the diamond Ace and the spade King. There entered too the slight question of hand management, in that, if possible, a trump must be retained in the Dummy to provide for a possible ruff of the fourth round of spades in case West had more than two spades to the King.

So planning, the Declarer won the first trump-trick with the Ten and immediately led a diamond, as the favorable location of the diamond Ace was an essential part of his plan. West won with the Ace and returned another heart, which was again won in the closed hand, the Queen being retained in the Dummy. The diamond King was next cashed, and a low diamond returned and ruffed. The Declarer then led the spade Knave, West played low, and the finesse held. The spade Queen was then successfully finessed and the Ace laid down. The last diamond was now led from Dummy and ruffed with the heart King, following which the last spade in the closed hand was led and ruffed with Dummy's last trump. Two tricks in clubs were conceded, but the contract was made, a result that could not have been achieved had not the Declarer taken careful stock of his resources and then utilized them to the utmost. He assumed the element of favorable distribution, but, assuming this, he safeguarded himself against minor disasters.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Kindly advise the correct bidding on the following hand:

South	North
♠ K J 10 8 6 5 2	♠ A 3
♡ Q 8	♡ A K 10 5
◇ K J 2	◇ A 7 5
♣ A	♣ J 10 7 3

Answer: The correct bidding would be:

South	North
1 ♠	3 ♡
3 ♠	3 N.T.
5 ♠	5 N.T.
7 ♠	Pass

This hand is interesting principally because of South's five-spade bid. This is a deliberate invitation to his partner to bid five notrump if he holds three Aces and the King of a bid suit. When this actual holding is affirmed, the seven-bid is justified, as it is apparent that, at worst, the hand depends upon a spade break.

Heart of a Wife

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

"Tony" Becomes More Suspicious of Madge

The old adage concerning the advisability of the same punishment for lambs and sheep came into my mind as the mocking query, "Then where do we go from here?" came to me from the lips of the driver of the big maroon sedan. By my acceptance of a "lift" I patently had put myself upon the same level of conduct as the man waiting for me. I might as well use that new position to the best advantage.

Accordingly, I tried to imagine what the type of woman he imagined me to be would have answered to his query, and with a little laugh, into which I deliberately put a suggestion of coquetry, I replied to his query:

"From here I go to the other corner," I said. "The car might have gone either way, you know. You don't mind waiting, I hope. Believe me, I am terrible sorry to inconvenience you this way, but I really am at my wits' end."

Nick laughed indulgently. "Take your time, Babe," he said. "Take all the time there is. I'd wait any hours for you, kid. You've sure got me."

I writhed inwardly, but there was nothing I could do to stop him in whatever ridiculous or bizarre thing he might choose to say.

FINDS BAG

I ran to the other side of the road, the only other possible place where Ronald might have dropped the silken bag of pebbles, and bent searchingly above the road bed. I walked slowly a distance of several yards from the corner, and just as I was giving up the search in despair, the beam from my flashlight picked up the sheen of silk, and the next instant my eager fingers were clutching the tiny bag of pebbles, and I was racing back to the car.

"Look!" I exclaimed triumphantly, holding up the bag. "I told you the truth! Here is the bag Ronald said he would drop. The car has gone this way. Oh, hurry, please!"

Nick held out his hand for the bag, as I climbed into the car. He looked at it for a second, then turned and tossed it back to Tony.

"Looks as if Baby were telling the truth," he said.

"Of all the saps," Tony growled, "you take the cake. She probably had it in her hand all the time, and dropped it where she found it."

"You wouldn't believe you were going to a fight if the gatekeeper handed you ringside seats," Nick retorted, and in an agony of impatience, I put my hand upon the wheel of the car.

SPEEDS ON WAY

"Oh, won't you start it, please?" I pleaded.

With a quick, feral motion, Nick put out his sinewy, strong hand and caught mine in it, squeezing it, and then releasing it as suddenly.

"Atta girl!" he said complacently. "Ask me nice, like that, and you can have anything you want. I'll show you some speed on this old crate now."

He kept his word so well that for the next stretch of road, until we came to another cross roads, I had the sensation of being hurled through the air, and his stopping of the car was a brake-screeching nerve-racking performance.

"Here's your second cross roads," he said. "Better hurry with your searching, or they'll get too much of a head start on us."

I needed no urging of his to hurry me. I raced back and forth over the ground nearest the corners of the cross roads, but found nothing for my pains. The road we were now on was a broader, better thoroughfare than the one we had left, and I was fairly certain that the car we were trailing would continue on it for a time without any turns.

I could give no reason, even to myself, for this belief, but repeated futile searches of the cross roads we crossed confirmed my intuition.

But finally, at a corner which was not a cross roads—only a single road branching from the main one—I found another of the little bags.

"I thought so!" Tony snarled from the back seat. "This is the way to Jerry's."

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

Chronic Sinusitis

Victims of sinusitis bitterly complain when there are sudden changes in the weather. Temperature changes aggravate this common affliction. There are pain and discomfort in the face, forehead and around the eyes.

Dr. Copeland

The nasal sinuses are a group of air cells located in the bones, close to the nose. Sinusitis is an inflammation of one or more of the nasal sinuses. It becomes chronic if there is neglect of the acute inflammation.

Pain in the forehead, eyeache or any pain in the face should never be neglected. I am confident that if all sufferers from acute sinusitis received immediate medical attention, chronic sinusities would not be a common disease. But, as it is, the number of cases is legion.

I am often asked what causes sinusitis. It most frequently follows attacks of colds, coryza, influenza, pneumonia, and other infectious diseases. The germs reach the nasal passageways and sinuses and cause an inflammation.

Another common factor in producing this disagreeable trouble is swimming and diving in water contaminated by germs. Infected teeth, tonsils and adenoids may lead to infection of the sinuses.

Persistent sinusitis is an uncomfortable ailment. It undermines the general health and may lead to serious constitutional disorders. Just as infected teeth and tonsils are a menace to good health, infected sinuses also impair the body strength.

Pus that accumulates within the sinuses leads to poisoning of the system. This is often the underlying cause of such ailments as arthritis, rheumatism, hay fever, asthma, heart disease, backache, high blood pressure and disease of the kidney.

As a rule, the victim of sinusitis complains of head pains. He may have discomfort and pain elsewhere in the body. Sinusitis should be expected when other points of infection have been eliminated.

Inflammation of the sinuses can be recognized by X-ray pictures of the face and by means of a simple test called the "transillumination test."

In this test the patient is placed in a darkened room. A small cylinder containing an electric bulb is placed in the patient's mouth and his lips closed over it. When the sinuses are clear, the light will shine through the cheeks. If pus is present the light is not clearly transmitted, and shadows show.

SAVAGE PARADISE
by Margaret Matches
A Girl's Story of her Adventures in the South Seas
MARGARET MATCHES got the wanderlust. Weary of commuting to her job each day in New York, she threw caution to the winds, set sail on a freighter for Port Moresby, Papua!
Miss Matches never reached Papua. Fate took a hand in her travels, shunted her to the mysterious islands of the Bismarck Archipelago, north of Australia. There she saw more strange sights, experienced more unusual adventures than she could have found in a lifetime in Papua.

Make Child Feel Necessary

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

It is unfortunate and depressing in life when the feeling of being unnecessary comes to people. I am thinking first of a lovely old lady whose children and grandchildren adore her to the point that they won't let her move a finger to help about the house. And grandmother can't get used to sitting with folded hands. It has done nothing toward making her happy. She only feels and sees daily that the home, the world goes on efficiently, without any assistance from her. And it is not a nice thought.

The child often endures the same left-out, not-needed sensation because a lot of us are too much in a hurry, too impatient to stop and think of little tasks the child could do, little acts which would create the glow of usefulness and necessity in his heart.

"What can I do?" asked a lad I'm terribly fond of. "Not play, I want to help you." My brain raced for a minute. Then I answered: "You're just the fellow to do a job I despise. Go into the large clothes-press, haul the soiled clothing out of the laundry hamper and make a list. Then you can type it for me." Whistling, he toiled for quite a while. Beaming, he showed me the laundry all sorted and listed, and with a jaunty air he sauntered home. He had been necessary somewhere. He had been needed and he had filled that need.

And that is a priceless feeling to give the children. It is sometimes quicker and easier to do the task yourself, but in so doing, you are robbing the child of a certain amount of self-respect, and a large amount of an emotion we must each have to keep going—that of being included somewhere, somehow in a friendly circle of which we are a component part.

DEBT ELEMENT HURTS TRADE CONDITIONS

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, May 13.—The other day a woman told me that her grocer had made the following statement to her. Said he:

"I have recently bought 150 cases of canned goods, and I can offer you a bargain. I was able to get these goods at the old price, and I will sell to you at the regular price which has been prevailing.

"Canned goods are going up. Just look at the stock market! I advise you to buy now. Of course, it makes no difference to me, as I can sell them later at higher prices."

In the course of the conversation, he commented on his troubles with collections. One man owes him several hundred dollars. The last time the grocer dunned him, this customer exclaimed:

"Why, man, I'm not going to move away!"

(The grocer said that it might be best if he did move).

It seems to me that there is a good deal of meat in this episode.

NOT SURE OF RISE

We note that the canner was willing to sell his goods to the grocer without any advance, and that the grocer was offering to sell without a mark-up. This appears to indicate no great certainty in their minds as to the trend of prices.

We also note that, at the time, the appeal seemed to be to the customer's fear of a price advance.

Then, too, the background of debt is seen, and this illustrates one difficulty in the current condition of business. A great many customers will still need any increase in earnings to pay for goods already bought and consumed in the past.

ODD COMPLICATIONS

Business and economic life are certainly complex, and they often move in circles. For example, this grocer's customer who does not pay his bills is a speculator. He may hold the stock of the packing company which sold the canned goods.

It is said that canned goods prices are going to rise. So the company's stock is bid up on the exchange. This customer buys the stock on a margin and he buys the canned goods on credit. If he makes a profit on his stock, he pays his grocer.

SHOULD TAKE PROFITS

My thought is that, while everybody wants improvement and better times, the rapid advance which has occurred in the prices of many securities and speculative commodities has amply discounted any improvement which we can reasonably count on.

Optimistic debtors who have taken speculative positions ought now to be taking some profits for the sake of their creditors.

The man who does not deliberately desire to run great speculative risks should reflect that prices on speculative exchanges have now had a large sharp rise, which is far greater than any known or reasonably probable decline in the purchasing power of the dollar.

The time must come before long when either (1) something more than now seems probable will be done to our monetary system, or (2) prices will settle down to await tangible improvement in net earnings and in net assets of customers, stores and manufacturers.

STOCK MARKET PRICES TURN DOWNWARD

NEW YORK, May 13.—(AP.)—The stock market dragged lower in the early trading today.

Losses were fractions to more than a point. Oils and some of the wet stocks were steady, but rails and industrials turned reactionary. Activity lessened somewhat on the recessions.

American Telephone sagged a point after early firmness. Other losses of a point or more were shown in Case, Consolidated Gas, National Steel, American Smelting, Columbian Carbon and Du Pont. General Motors was a heavy spot, dropping nearly a point, while other losses of major fractions were shown in United States Steel, Sears Roebuck, American Can, American Tobacco B, United Aircraft, General Electric and New York Central.

While the inflation bill is now the law of the land, the financial community's major attention was directed on the German situation. Reports that France and Great Britain might occupy the Rhine again if Germany seeks greater armaments than permitted under the Versailles Treaty was coupled, in discussions of the situation, with the announcement that the Reich would ignore the gold-bond clause in the Young bonds.

In most banking circles here there was less criticism of Germany's attitude towards its gold clause obligations than might, normally occur, because, it is pointed out, the Reich is simply emulating the example of the United States.

Although the political news was confused, the financial district was again heartened by optimistic trade reports. Automobile production during the week ended May 13 was estimated at 51,671 units by Cram's automotive reports. This was 235 over the previous week and the eighth consecutive week to show an increased production over the preceding period.

The dollar was firmer in the foreign exchanges today. Sterling opened at $3.96¾, a decline of ⅜a of a cent, while French francs stood at 4.61½, an overnight decline of 2½ points.

COTTON FALLS UNDER SALES

NEW YORK, May 13.—(AP.)—Cotton futures opened barely steady, 7½ lower under realizing and week-end liquidation. May, 8.72; July, 8.38; October, 9.11; December, 9.27; January, 9.32; March, 9.46.

Wholesale Prices Show Upward Trend

WASHINGTON, May 13.—(AP.)—Wholesale prices for the week ended May 6, are shown by the Bureau of Labor statistics compilation to have increased approximately four-tenths of 1 per cent.

The index figure for the week was 61.9, compared with 61.5 for the week ended April 29.

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, May 13.—(AP.)—Bank clearings again show a further slight improvement—a small reduction, compared with the clearings of a year ago continues, but the decline is less than for any normal week so far this year. The total this week at all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dunn & Bradstreet, Inc., of $4,290,299,000 was only 3.9 per cent lower. At New York City, clearings were $3,163,558,000, an increase of 3.6 per cent over last year, while the aggregate for centers outside of New York of $1,121,741,000 is 20.1 per cent smaller.

The improvement is due mainly to the larger clearings at New York City. At the other large centers in the East and the West, the decline from a year ago is not so severe as it has been in the past Clearings at the South also continue the improvement recently noted. There are very small losses at St. Louis, Atlanta, Dallas, Minneapolis and San Francisco, and a small gain at Richmond. This week's total is below that for the first week of May by $214,614,000, whereas a year ago the reduction for the second week of May was $939,563,000.

Clearings at leading centers, showing increases and decreases as compared with those of last year, are printed herewith; also, daily bank clearings for the year to date:

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Gesture

Rain for my heart—or roses for my senses
Grief for a spell—then rapture overbright,
Love is the last of all my old defenses—
Dancing in sunlight—fading in the night.

Fever and chill have held me in possession,
Passion and calm have had their little day,
And over all this cynical confession——
Sing out your sorrows as you go your way.

Sing out your grief—along the road are stumblingg
Those who are still—but feel the stinging pain,
Fools such as I—incompetent and fumbling
For an old dream that will not live again;

Well do I know how feeble is my lute——
Yet if they need me—I must not be mute!
—Don Wahn.

Such an Answer!

Tony Schoenhoff, of Minneapolis, hopes you haven't heard the one about the guy who was discussing his girl.

"She's a darn good sport," he said.

"Oh, well," comforted the listener, "mine isn't so hot lookin', either."

Merciless Truth

Take it from Ed Wallace—— Broadway is where a feller can go—to see just how much kinder Fate has been to him.

Novelette

She is one of the prettiest girls in the Feverish Midst. The lads like her a lot. Her reputation is spotless. And she rarely speaks. When she does, however, she says something.

One of the boys hogged her companionship for almost six months. You know, just a snack or two in the Broadway cafes—after she had finished her own dancing specialties—or a drive up the Drive—and perhaps a peck of a good-night kiss. One night as he left—he said:

"See you Friday."

Seven months later—he called at her night club.

"Hello," he hello'd indifferently.

"Hello," she cooed as she lowered her luscious lamps, "is this —Friday?"

Moral: It is a woman's privilege to remember—a man's—to forget.

Sins of the Fathers

At Albuquerque, N. M., where "The Chief" pauses a few moments, autograph seekers were searching for movie stars. The conductor also pointed out the 6 year-old daughter of this department, as she was inspecting Indian dolls.

A few women cornered Walda for her autograph. Not being a bit ritz she obliged with her baby scribbling, plus a kriss cross.

"All aboard!" called the conductor, directing his plea to Walda.

"Nedder mind!" she scolded, as she went looking for strangers, "I go-ning to write my name more!"

And she did.

The train finally got under way 10 minutes later.

Cruel Crack

And then there's the one about the proud mother who went on chatting about her pride and joy.

"Yes," she said, "he's only a year old now and he's been walking since he was eight eight months old!"

"Really?" replied the bored listener, "he must be awf'ly tired."

Thrill Movie Showing In Penn

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Hell Below," photoplay current on the Penn screen, is filled with sensational thrills of action in a submarine in war service, fortifying a dramatic triangular romance, the whole being leavened with some comedy incidents that occur when the crew of the submarine is given liberty ashore. The love sequences are not of the kind that win audience sympathy, and, although they involve Robert Montgomery and Madge Evans, and possibly are supposed to be paramount in the story, it is quite likely most people will find them incidental to the marine story, that illustrates the heroism of the personnel of the fleet.

Montgomery is a young officer on a submarine commanded by Walter Huston. Ashore he meets a young woman at a party and is hit hard romantically. Then he learns she is the daughter of his commander—and also is married. They are both in love, and when he later learns that her husband is a helpless invalid, he plans to make their position clear to the husband and marry the young woman.

But fate has strange ways of straightening things out. Montgomery is court martialed for disobedience, the husband is given promise of restoration of health, the Navy will be in need of a good officer like Huston, so Montgomery has an opportunity of performing an act of great heroism that will benefit at once, his country, his self-respect and the woman he loves.

Scenes aboard the submarine are dramatic and authentic, showing the operation of such a craft as it torpedoes enemy ships, which are shown sinking, and the consequence of deep diving, imperiling the lives of all on board, to escape depth bombs dropped when their position is discovered by the enemy. It is all very exciting.

Jimmy Durante takes care of the comedy. He is a member of the crew, and he gets into plenty of trouble ashore, including a laughable bout with a boxing kangaroo in a carnival. But as a reward he becomes possessed of the most remarkable "elk's" tooth in the world.

THELMA TODD AND DENNIS KING ALL FRILLED UP FOR FILM OF POPULAR COMIC OPERA, "FRA DIAVOLO"

Chatterton Stanley Star

By MILDRED FILLMORE

"Lilly Turner," film in the Stanley, gives Ruth Chatterton another of those good-bad girl roles, a lass who has an unfortunate break in the way of romance that begins when her "husband" flees just a foot or two ahead of the stork, an officer and an irate wife, who is on his trail for bigamy. From that to the end, it is just a tough break for Lilly, a role that Miss Chatterton characterizes with her customary artistry, but it does not give much satisfaction since the portrait is mostly long-faced and gloomy, and without the constant appeal of self-sacrifice that has marked her previous roles of somewhat similar character.

True, she does make the sacrificial gesture at the finale, by sticking to the man who had married her to help her out of a tough spot. He is badly injured by a maniac, and although he is a booze-head and a drag, and they never have been man and wife except in name, she gives up plans for a divorce and happiness as the wife of a young engineer, played by George Brent.

As a whole it is a story of a show girl, first with a carnival, and then with the outfit of old Doc. Magill, alias Guy Kibbee, who uses her and a strong man as models to illustrate the benefits to be derived from reading his book on health. There is no evidence that he ever read it himself, although he is a pretty good patron of the drug store. When she is deserted Frank McHugh, a carnival roustabout, marries her in a chivalrous move. Then comes Brent to take the place of the strong man who suddenly goes insane. It is a case of real love for both, that is dashed when the strong man escapes and injures McHugh in a frenzied attack. You see, he, too, loves Lilly.

Besides the players mentioned, all of whom do good work in an unpleasant story, there is a word of commendation due to Robert Barrat, who does a strong dramatic bit as the insane man.

Bing Crosby In Clover

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., May 13.—There's no depression for crooners. Bing Crosby, noted for his dulcent harmonies, will begin a new series of radio broadcasts next week. He has just signed for a third picture at Paramount and he is considering a handsome offer to go to the Monseigneur Club in London in September.

The singer, who first hypnotized the public in the Ambassador's Cocoanut Grove, will take a leading role in Paramount's "Cruise to Nowhere," an original story by Walton Hall Smith. This will follow "Cloudy With Showers," to which Bing also has been assigned in the last week.

Along with most of the other male stars of Hollywood, Crosby is bitten by the hunting fad. He spends his time these days polishing up guns in preparation for a trip into one of the numerous wilds convenient to this city of make-believe.

That iron constitution which has carried Director W. S. Van Dyke safely through Africa, the South Seas and Alaska, is complaining a bit. Woody has had to trek down to Palm Springs to bake out a case of pleurisy. It is a recurrence of a malady that almost cost his life on the recent expedition into the Far North. Suffering an attack of pleurisy pneumonia, Van Dyke insisted on being carried onto the set for days so that the company would not lose time and so that discipline and morale might be preserved.

* * *

The acting she does in the local stage production of "Dinner at Eight" has put Alice White's name on Hollywood tongues again. Willy Pogany is doing a portrait of her in oils. . . . Incidentally, Hugo Ballins' unusual study of Dolores Del Rio is attracting considerable attention in the lobby of the Ambassador. Not so long ago, Ballins combined painting with a successful career as a film director.

* * *

Will Rogers already is a bit rueful about that appeal for a family of four or five kids to use in his new picture. The other day at Fox, four families gathered in front of the administration building and two at the auto gate. Returning home, Will found another brood sitting on a log by the entrance to the private road leading to his estate. And, to climax the day, another group stood ambushed by his garage.

Pitt Audience Sees 'Over the Coals'

"Over the Coals," a lively revue, the skits of which include satires on local and national political matters, as well as movies and radio, was presented last night in the Pitt, where it will be repeated tonight. This is the second annual production of a student group, The Bacchanalians, an organization representative of all of the schools of Tech. Music students contributed to the musical features, drama students to the technical details of production as well as acting. Girls as well as boys are members of the cast. It was much enjoyed by the first night audience.

Among the comedy skits creating the most laughter were "Return of the Native," satirizing birth control; "Bubchen in Uniform," burlesque on football and the student pledge idea; "The Forgotten Man," a little fun with Herbert Hoover, and "The Quaker Maid," a poke at blue laws with an Earl Carroll flavor. Dancing of Bill Bales, Patti Littel and the ensemble was especially good. Polly Rowles and George McCalmon were prominent in the comedy.

Tal Henry and Band At Kennywood

Tal Henry and the North Carolinians will play for the dance tonight at Kennywood Park. A Mother's Day program will be given in the Kennywood bandstand tomorrow afternoon and night by Izzy Cervone's American Legion Band. Jimmy Comoroda, tenor, will sing two songs dedicated to the country's mothers. A free vaudeville show will be given.

Great Parade On Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Striking pictures of the immense parade in New York City to protest against Adolf Hitler's persecution of Jews in Germany are brought to the screen in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. More than 100,000 march and another 100,000 line the sidewalks. The Globe Trotter graphically describes the affair.

From Germany come pictures of the most gigantic peace-time demonstration ever held anywhere, with the exception of Moscow, to celebrate May Day. More than a million persons are shown assembled in two fields. Von Hindenburg and Hitler speak.

In Paris, May Day did not pass off so peaceably, and the result is some of the most thrilling riot scenes ever brought to the screen. Mounted guards arrive and eventually the rioters are overpowered.

Army bombing planes are shown in maneuvers at Patterson Air Field, Fairfield, O. An enormous smoke screen is laid 1,000 feet up in which the planes hide from anti-aircraft guns.

Still smoking and smouldering, the ruins of the $3,000,000 night fire that wiped out the business section of Ellsworth, Me., are shown.

Daredevil riders on horse and motorcycles rehearse before the King for the Royal Tournament by the British Signal Corps.

Amelia Earhart and Fannie Hurst are seen and heard as they bid goodbye to Ruth Ryan Owen on the eve of her departure as United States Minister to Denmark.

(Note—Owing to the necessity upon theater managers to arrange their programs in time schedules, it is possible that some of the subjects in the above issue of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.)

Market Firm, Price Steady On Real Brew

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Federal prohibition agents complain they are allowed only $10 expense money per week.

That's plenty for the five government senses: Snooping, sniffing, sipping, gulping and gargling.

We will take the same job at less a week and do very well. What we want is mercy, not justice.

There are still speakies in New York which peddle essence of delirium and sweet spirits of hoodlumism. They charge 50 cents a snorter.

But the beer is legal and on a five-and-ten-cent ratio. A man with ten dollars to invest can get a hundred glasses at 10 or a thousand on margin.

We have put in a buying order at five.

The Perfect Gentleman

In a fashionable restaurant in the upper Forties the other night, a young man arose and slapped the face of the lady with him. He was immediately thrown out for conduct unbecoming a gentleman . . .

* * *

MARTIN B—— is the son of a very wealthy family. His social standing is of the very highest. Moreover, he has always been taught to respect his fellow humans and to help them if it didn't cost too much money. Ever since he first restrained himself from hurling a bottle at the head of his governess, he has always been considered a gentleman by all who knew him.

Particularly has he been a gentleman as far as women were concerned. He respected them all as though each one was his mother. When he attended college every girl on the campus referred to Martin as the perfect gentleman. But they never went out with him more than once. He was too courteous.

As the years rolled onward, Martin never changed. He worked hard during the day and slept peacefully during the night.

Finally, about a year ago, he met a girl who didn't mind being treated like a lady. She had been pawed by so many gentlemen in society that Martin was a welcome relief to her. So she went out with him four or five times. Which was more than Martin ever expected from one girl.

Her friends kidded her about the situation.

"Don't see how you can stand him around," they told her. "He's such a perfect gentleman that he gets on your nerves. Don't you ever long to have him take a wallop at you? It would do so much to relieve monotony."

The girl shook her head.

"I like Martin," was her response, "I like him because he's on the level and a real man. I like him very much."

When a girl makes up her mind on a thing like that the consequences are inevitable. Before Martin knew what had happened to him he and the girl were engaged to be married . . .

This was one of those long engagements and, what with one thing and another, the marriage was delayed several times. It was finally agreed that they were to be married the latter part of July at Martin's country estate. This arrangement still stands.

Two weeks ago Martin left for Chicago on some business. His fiancee was down to see him off. And as she kissed him goodbye she gave him a few words of cheer.

"If you want to step out while you're away, Martin," she smiled, "go ahead and do it. You'll be an old married man pretty soon, you know. This is just about your last chance to get wild."

Martin shook his head solemnly.

"Dearest," he said, "I want you to know that I never forget my place. I love you and you alone And a gentleman doesn't trample on love."

Whereupon he kissed his bride-to-be and entered his drawing room. What a man!

Some five days ago, his business completed, Martin was on his way back to New York. In the diner he sat at a small table with a rather pretty girl. He looked at her and he saw a suggestion of tears in her eyes. She was dining with tears in her eyes.

Martin's careful training came to the fore. He spoke to her immediately and wanted to know if there wasn't something he could do. And later that night he dragged the story from her.

She had been working as a secretary, it seems, in Chicago. Her mother lived in New York and she was going home to her now. But what was she going to say to her? She had lost her job!

Yes, sir. The job that she needed so badly was gone. The money she had been sending home to mother would now come in no longer.

Martin's heart was touched.

"As soon as we reach New York," he asserted, "you will call me at my office. I will arrange an appointment at my house for dinner and I will have my fiancee there. We will figure out something for you to do. You have no further cause to worry."

The girl clasped his hand.

"You're a gentleman," she said. "A real gentleman," . . .

The dinner was arranged. Martin explained everything to his fiancee. She met the girl just before dinner was served—and she didn't seem to like her. She told Martin as much—but he merely patted her hand.

"Don't be foolish, my dear," he observed. "This poor child is in need of help. Unless we aid her, she will become a derelict. We must help her."

During the dinner wine was served. The poor child seemed to forget herself. As Martin and his fiancee looked on in amazement the girl poured glass after glass into herself. When the dinner was over she wasn't drunk. No, sir. She was absolutely cockeyed.

So stewed did she become, in fact, that she passed quietly out of the picture. Martin's fiancee became very haughty. She grabbed her hat, threw a disgusted look at the girl and bounced out of the place. Such a thing!

Martin was at an absolute loss. Never having been a Broadway columnist, this was something new for him. He placed her gingerly upon a couch, removed her shoes nervously and then sat around and bit his nails. The butler entered and suggested that they had better get a doctor.

Martin agreed. He went out for a physician. And when he returned the girl was gone. Martin breathed a heavy sigh of relief.

But the relief was short-lived. The following morning found the girl and her mother at Martin's apartment. And what that alleged mother didn't say to our hero is very little to speak of. To make a long story short, she accused Martin of every crime on the calendar.

"I know," screamed the mother, "that you're a millionaire. But you can't get away with a thing like this. Meeting my daughter on a train and convincing the poor soul that she should come to your apartment. And then giving her liquor and taking advantage of her!

"You can't get away with this, mister, in spite of all your money. You're going to pay. And you'll pay heavy."

It was, of course, the old badger game. But Martin didn't know that. The thing frightened him so that he paid on the spot. And, whether you believe it or not, he paid $10,000 . . .

Martin met his fiancee that night. He was in a terrible humor; the worst of his life. He was sore at himself and the world. And he told his fiancee the entire story.

Whereupon she did the worst thing she could have done.

"Well," she murmured, nastily. "That's what you get for being a perfect gentleman." . . .

Lager Movie In Davis

By WILLIAM T. SCHOYER

The first dramatization of legal beer is being presented this week in the Davis and Sheridan Square, under the title, "Song of the Eagle." Maybe the title means that the eagle (the good old U. S. A.) is not going to let racketeers take its beer away.

Beginning in halcyon pre-prohibition days, the film traces the history of an honorable brewer's family. Although it dissipates potential effectiveness by straying too far from the theme, there's plenty of shooting as Charles Bickford, as chief mobster, dictates the death of the brewmeister, the father—and then the son, Richard Arlen. A creditable climax is reached when the mother takes vengeance in her own hands.

Jack Holt, as usual, is about the whole show in "The Woman I Stole," co-feature. A story of desert oil fields, treachery, and another man's wife, the film hits the high point of excitement as Jack, clad in pajamas, with only a toothbrush in his hand, steps out to conquer bandits beleaguering his camp. It's good he-man Holt adventure, with Fay Wray as the soulless, beautiful cause-of-it-all.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

TULSA, Okla., May 13.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Well, here we are flying out of Tulsa, the first town in America to become a city. This is one of the best and busiest airports in our country. Oklahoma wants to vote on the beer thing but they have no money to pay for the election, so Missouri offers to pay for Oklahoma's election provided Oklahoma will guarantee to vote dry and let them have the sales privilege as they do now. Corn is 40 and 50 cents a bushel but no farmer has any. He sold last fall and winter at 15 cents. They thought Roosevelt was just another President.

Yours, WILL.

HEAD PLAY CLASS IF LADYSMAN FAILS

HARDLY RECOVERED FROM the surprising result and the exciting features of the Kentucky Derby one week ago, horseracing fans today turn their attention to another annual high spot on the turf calendar, the Preakness at Pimlico. The general inclination is to view the Maryland classic as a repetition of the duel between Broker's Tip and Head Play, which finished only a nose apart last Saturday at Churchill Downs, with a chance for Owner E. R. Bradley to duplicate with Broker's Tip the double victory he scored with Burgoo King in the Preakness and Derby last year, a feat accomplished previously only by Sir Barton in 1919 and Gallant Fox in 1930.

E. R. Bradley

But it may be nothing of the sort. Conditions are not the same. It's a different track, both Broker's Tip and Head Play will have a change of jockeys, the distance will be shortened from a mile and a quarter to a mile and three-sixteenths, and some of the other horses, particularly Ladysman, may show to better advantage than in the Derby. Head Play, properly ridden, looks superior to Broker's Tip, and may prove to be the class of the field if Ladysman doesn't pull a strong comeback. But Jimmy Smith and Al Robertson, the new riders of Broker's Tip and Head Play, may inhale fandom's false impression that it is a two-horse race and give so much attention to beating each other that some other starter may come along and beat both of them. Horse-racing is that way.

THE PREAKNESS IS older than the Derby, and takes its name from the first horse that won it. Gov. Bowie, of Maryland, offered a $15,000 purse for a two-mile sweepstake for 3-year-olds at Pimlico in October, 1870, called the Dinner Party Stakes. Seven horses started, and the winner was Preakness, a bay colt by Lexington-Bay Leaf, the time over a slow track being 3:47½. The race was made an annual event as the Dixie Stake in 1873, and in 1888 became the Preakness.

After 1889 there was an interruption until 1909, but since the latter year the stake has been run annually. In 1918 it was run in two divisions, the winners being War Cloud and Jack Hare, Jr. The longest-price winner was Nellie Morse in 1924, $45.60 for a $2 mutuel ticket. The shortest price was 1 to 30 on Buddhist, which defeated Japhet in 1889, when there were only two starters. The shortest price since mutuels started in 1911 was $3.60 for a $2 ticket on Man o' War.

IN LESS THAN five innings against the Giants yesterday, Bill Swift was nicked for six earned runs, exactly as many as he had allowed in five games previously. Just one of the off days that come to every pitcher.

It was the first time the Bucs were stopped after one victory in a winning gait. No previous winning streak had been shorter than three games. The count for the trip is six victories against only three defeats, which might be called pretty fair.

SINCE THE RECENT reunion of old-time Phillies, there have been several repetitions of a misstatement made frequently in recent years that Jack Clements was the only left-hand catcher ever to play in the majors. Clements was only one of four southpaw backstops to work in the National League. The first was Mike Hines, who caught for Boston in 1883-84-85. Fred Tenney, following a college course at Brown, was a catcher for Boston in 1894-95-96 and worked behind the bat in four games in 1897 before he was converted into a first-baseman to supplant Tom Tucker. And it was the Pirates who presented the fourth in the person of Jiggs Donohue. Coming here from the Dayton (O.) club, Donohue caught in two games in 1900, and was used in part of one game in 1901 before being released to Minneapolis, later becoming a star first-baseman for the White Sox.

Jack Clements

TENNY AND DONOHUE won places among the greatest first-sackers of all time after giving up catching, and they set some records that still stand. One is Tenney's total of 152 assists in a season, and another is Fred's mark of leading the league in assists seven times in succession. In 1907, Donohue established records of 1,856 put-outs and 1,986 total chances in a season.

Clements, though not the only left-hand catcher, was easily the greatest of that type. He was a star backstop for the Phillies for 13 consecutive seasons, from 1885 to 1897, inclusive. In addition to being a high-class catcher he was a strong hitter, his best average being .389 in 1895.

THE EXPLANATION GIVEN by the Oakland club, of the Pacific Coast League, in releasing George Kelly, that the veteran first baseman was a disappointment at bat, carried a familiar ring.

Obtained by the Pirates on 10 days' trial on August 3, 1917, big George failed to make a hit in his first five games, and in eight games he delivered only two safeties in 23 times at bat, for the puny average of .087. He was turned back to the Giants with thanks, but later became one of John McGraw's most valuable players.

THE DECISION OF St. Andrew's to charge admission at this year's British open golf tournament is expected to cause complications. British pros for a long time have felt that they were entitled to some of the money taken in at the open tourneys, but thus far they have not collected, because admission fees are a modern installation and an uncertain one. This will be the first time it has been tried at St. Andrew's, and if the plan works out the British ruling body may find itself forced to give the pros a cut.

AMONG THE CONNECTING links between the old days and the present in the boxing game might be mentioned an announcer who antedates even that other famous veteran, Joe Humphreys. He is Peter Prunty, still announcing regularly at the New York fight clubs.

Prunty was the announcer at the Terry McGovern-Pedlar Palmer fight for the bantamweight championship in Tuckahoe, N. Y., on September 12, 1899. And he recalls that he hadn't recovered his breath after introducing the fighters when he had to climb right back into the ring again and announcee the time of the knockout.

FOLLOWERS OF TRACK and field sports should see a neck-and-neck duel at the Stadium this afternoon with Pitt meeting Penn State in their annual scrap, the twenty-first tangle in the series between the old rivals.

Wayland Dunaway

The Panthers captured only three of the 20 previous engagements, but stand a better chance today to make it one more than at any time in the last four seasons. One of the earlier tussles was a triangular affair, with Penn the third contestant. All of the others were dual meets.

THE LIONS HAVE dropped two meets thus far in 1933, losing to Army and North Carolina. The showing against the Tarheels indicates that Coach Nate Cartmell's charges cannot be counted out before the conclusion of today's struggle, however. That meet was decided by the close score of 64½ to 61½, and it was not until the final event that North Carolina clinched the honors. The Tarheels had defeated Navy and Georgetown previously. Penn State's best chance for a first today would appear to be in the half-mile, in which Wayland Dunaway, captain and a product of State College High School, will carry the Blue and White. Dunaway won his event in both the Army and North Carolina meets.

FRENCH TO TACKLE GIANTS TODAY

BROKER'S TIP, HEAD PLAY DUEL AGAIN

BALTIMORE, May 13.—(AP.)—The weather man did not hold out much hope for a good track for the forty-third running of the Preakness at Pimlico today as a rising temperature and overcast skies, which predicted more rain before post time (5 p. m., Eastern Standard Time,) greeted the early arrivals at the "Old Hilltop" course. Heavy rains of last night, following the soakings of the last few days, turned the racing strip into a quagmire.

Mrs. Silas M. Mason's Head Play was favored at 8-to-5 to win the one and 3-16 miles galop for $25,000. Despite his hair-line victory over Head Play in the Kentucky Derby, E. R. Bradley's Broker's Tip was rated no beter than a chance to break into the money as the experts flocked to the support of the W. R. Coe entry of Ladysman, champion juvenile of 1932, Pomponius and Pompoleon.

BROKER'S TIP TO START

Definitely spiking a rumor that the Derby winner had developed a fever and would not attempt to match strides with Head Play and the other colts, William Hurley, assistant trainer for the Bradley stable, early today stated Broker's Tip would start in the rich stake.

The speedy son of Black Toney, which snatched victory from Head Play in the final strides at Louisville, showed traces of a fever following a workout Thursday, but yesterday was out for a breeze and appeared as fit as the day he went to the Derby post.

Prospects of a heavy track sent the hopes of the Coe backers soaring as supporters of the white and green polka dot silks of the New York broker recalled the mud running ability of the sons of Pompey, especially Pomponius. The distance, one-sixteenth of a mile shorter than the Derby, is also a factor in favor of Ladysman, which did not like the route of the Churchill Downs classic.

TEN MAY START

Barring a right about face on the part of the weather man, 10 of the 11 colts are expected to face Starter James Milton at about 5 p. m. (E. S. T.). J. H. Stotler, trainer of the Coe stars, said he would not start Pompoleon unless something happened to Ladysman or Pomponius, but the remainder of the entrants are rated as sure starters.

Although Head Play, the Coe entry, and Broker's Tip figure to be the horses to beat for the prize of $26,850, if 10 start, at least four of the remaining entries were given an outside chance of unsetting the dope.

Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, who conditioned Gallant Fox for his 1930 Derby and Preakness, named two speedy colts in H. C. Phipps' De Valera and the Wheatley Stable's Utopian, both of which arrived on the scene of the battle with records of having burned up the Aqueduct course during the morning hours.

Horse and Jockey	Probable Odds
Poppyman, E. Steffen	20-1
Broker's Tip, J. Smith	11-5
Ladysman, R. Workman	4-1
Head Play, A. Robertson	2-1
Silent Shot, R. Jones	30-1
†Pompoleon, L. Knapp	4-1

†Utopian, J. Gilbert	5-1
†Pomponius, J. Bejshak	4-1

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: AN EXECUTIVE RECORD—The Hon. Hiram Bingham, while serving as lieutenant governor of Connecticut, was elected sixty-ninth Governor of the state in the November, 1924, election, to be drafted for the unexpired senatorial term of Senator Brandegee in December, 1924. He was inaugurated Governor of the state in the late afternoon of January 7, 1925, and resigned in the early hours of January 8, to take the oath as United States Senator. Before he boarded the 11.09 a. m. train for Washington that morning, he had crowded the tenure of three high offices in succession within the unprecedented space of 20 hours. THE LIGHTNING ROD FASHION—Benjamin Franklin's electrical experiments made electricity a fashionable fad in European society. A most curious outgrowth of the craze were the lightning rods which the ladies of the "haute monde" began to wear on their hats. The "rod" consisted of a woven metal ribbon which encircled the hat and terminated in a long silver cord trailing on the ground. Thus arrayed, the "grande dame" of Franklin's time not only considered herself in the height of fashion, but she also deemed herself proof against thunderbolts. A PUZZLING TREE-DWELLER—Fred Brown is the Mystery Man of Horatio, Ark. He has lived as a hermit in the vicinity for more than 28 years. For the last 10 years he has slept in a tank suspended in a tree, owl fashion. His origin and identity are an unfathomed mystery.

CUBANS TAKE CUP DOUBLES

HOT SPRINGS, Va., May 13.—(AP.)—Cuba, in an underdog role, upset the favored Canadians in the doubles match in the North American zone Davis Cup series yesterday with Capt. Ricardo Morales, Cuban ace, showing the way to a great uphill victory, 4-6, 0-6, 6-4, 6-4, 10-18.

The victory came to the Cubans after two defeats in the singles match and still left them with their backs to the wall, with Canada needing a victory in one of the singles today to take the series and win the right to meet the United States in the zone final.

Wright is pitted against Lorenzo Nodarse and Gilbert Nunns, of Canada, will meet Capt. Morales in the last singles matches. Previously, Wright defeated Morales and Nunns easily outpointed Nodarse.

Greenlee Field Merger With Arena Called off

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

The boxing setup for the summer season in the Pittsburgh district, announced only a few days ago, has undergone a complete change within the last 24 hours.

For one thing, the merger between the Arena and Greenlee Field is off, and, for another, the North Braddock (formerly Meyers) Bowl has struck a snag with the Boxing Commission which will have to be ironed out before it can proceed with business.

The hitch so far as the Bowl is concerned has to do with the promoter's license and the posting of a new bond. The club planned to operate under the Motor Square Garden papers, but it has developed that there is a change in the personnel of the club, and the Commission has decreed that a new bond will have to be furnished and a new promotor's license will have to be taken out.

TO REMAIN INDOORS

The break between the Arena and Greenlee Field is said to hinge upon the fact that Greenlee Field finds itself without a setup of field seats since its split with Joe Mazer and Jules Beck, who have taken over the Bowl. Mazer acted as promoter and Beck as matchmaker at Greenlee Field last year, and they brought with them the ringside seats of Motor Square Garden. The seats at the Arena are permanent and cannot be moved. In view of this difficulty, it is said, the Arena promoters have decided to go ahead with their original plan of operating all summer in their indoor quarters on the North Side, aided by the opening of the roof and a cooling system, which will permit them to run rain or shine.

Just what new arrangement Greenlee Field, which was to open on June 1 with a Vince Dundee-Frankie Goosby match, will make remains to be seen. The Bowl plans to open on May 31 and may be able to put its house in order in time to go ahead on schedule.

MILLVALE CLUB SET

Hickey Park, in Millvale, will be the first of the outdoor clubs to get under way. It will pry off the lid with a Ted Yarosz-Tommy Freeman show one week from next Monday and come back with a Tony Herrera-Tracey Cox return bout the following Monday.

If all of the clubs now in the field decide to operate the situation will be more complicated than ever, with four of them trying to squeeze in matches each week, despite the danger of postponements because of inclement weather. Hickey Park had been awarded Monday nights, the Bowl Wednesdays, and Greenlee Field Thursdays. The Arena has been running on Fridays.

Dugas Undergoes Operation On Leg

ALLENTOWN, Pa., May 13.—(AP.)—Gus Dugas, who held down first base for the Phillies during Don Hurst's holdout period at the beginning of the season, underwent an operation for an infection in his left leg yesterday.

He was spiked, a few weeks ago, in a game with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

LENORE CRACKS SWIM MARK

Lenore Kight, Homestead's champion girl swimmer, who holds a number of national A. A. U. titles and claims two world records, only successfully defended her indoor senior A. M. A. 500-yard free-style championship last night, but set a new record of 6:21 2-5. The old mark was 6:31 3-5, set by Miss Kight last year.

Miss Kight's effort was turned in at the A. M. A. championship meet in the Carnegie Library Club pool, Homestead.

Louise Clark finished second and Johanna Gorman third. The two are teammates of Miss Kight.

Three records in all were shattered during the evening's competition. In the 220-yard junior free-style championship event, Ruth Lacey, of Homestead, covered the distance in 3:12 3-5. Mary Salata, of Duquesne, was second and Mary Fagan, of Homestead, third.

Harry McGuire, of Duquesne, established a new mark of 6:25 in capturing the 500-yard junior free-style championship for men. William Swazdik, of the Civic Club, finished second and Mike Brody, of Duquesne, was third.

NEW YORK, May 13.—George Gibson and his first-place Pirates today yearned for Forbes Field and the home folks. Traveling almost continually since they moved into spring training almost three months ago, the Buccos ache for the long home stay which begins Monday.

The strain of a long barnstorming trip following their sojourn in California was not felt by the sturdy Buccaneers who opened the season in a blaze of splendor; neither was there any letdown in evidence as the Pittsburghers traveled back and forth to St. Louis on top of a short stay at home, but the strain appears to be taking its toll at last.

The favored Pittsburgh entry wobbled yesterday at the Polo Grounds and the Gibson machine rattled in many places. The pitching was off and so was the defense play of the Buccos, while the Pittsburgh hitters were not able to master the slants dished up by Hal Schumacher. The net result was a walkaway victory for the Giants, the score being 11-3.

GRACE FIRST CASUALTY

The Pirates, moreover, ran afoul of their first real casualty of the season. Catcher Earl Grace is lost to the club with an infected left leg. Quick work on the part of a physician reduced the temperature registered by Grace, who caught in Thursday's game with the ailing member. He will be out for several days, and the Buccos are fortunate that Earl's trouble has been checked.

Be that as it may, Gibby and his charges are eager for the "choo-choo" that will take them back to Pittsburgh for a stay of two weeks or better.

Larry French is primed to face the Giants this afternoon in the third game of the series. Manager Terry has Fred Fitzsimmons and Roy Parmelee ready for slab action.

BASEBALL COMEDY

By NICK ALTROCK

CHICAGO, May 13.—I told you the Yankees wouldn't make it a runaway race, but I didn't expect it would be the Western clubs that would yell "Whoa!" The American League certainly has turned out to be a fine squirrel cage.

Nick Altrock

Do you remember the experts nominated the A's and Washington exclusively to dynamite the Yankees? They couldn't see the Middle West any more than those Plymouth Rock Pilgrims. And now look at the blooming race. The A's are grappling with the Red Sox for the lease on the cyclone cellar. And the Clevelands and White Sox are sure whacking the Eastern clubs from ambush.

And are those towns nuts about the national pastime! Cleveland turned out 55,000 customers last Sunday. I didn't know that many people in America still had four bits. And if this is a depression we're having, I hope it lasts a couple more years.

BRAVES' LIGHT HITTING HANDICAPS BRANDT

STAR SOUTHPAW BEATS CARDS IN ELEVENTH

Associated Press.

Ed Brandt, great southpaw of the Boston Braves, soon will be ready to declare a personal day of thanksgiving and rejoicing any time his teammates go out and get him a half dozen runs in a single ball game.

The star left-hander has been pitching as good ball as he ever did this spring, perhaps a bit better, but his record for six games shows only two victories against four defeats. Only one of the games has been won or lost by more than one run and the four tallies the Braves scored in 11 innings to beat the St. Louis Cardinals, 4-3 yesterday, was the best scoring feat they have performed for Brandt yet. In five previous games they got him only six runs and 37 hits all told.

BERGER COMES THROUGH

Brandt gave the Cards only eight hits, but he was on the ragged edge of defeat when Wally Berger's sixth home run with two out in the ninth tied the score. In the eleventh, Berger doubled and came home with the deciding run on Wes Schulmerich's base hit.

The defeat left the Cards with a rather shaky hold on third place as the Cincinnati Reds walloped the Brooklyn Dodgers, 7 to 3, to pull up within half a game of St. Louis. With the aid of Walter Beck's wildness, the Reds scored six runs in the first inning. Beck loaded the bases with none out and Chick Hafey cleared them with a home run.

The New York Giants gave the day's best exhibition of slugging as they reversed the decision against Pittsburgh's league leaders, 11 to 3. Starting when Blondy Ryan hit a homer with two aboard in the fourth, the Giants piled up 14 hits against Bill Swift, Leon Chagnon and Hal Smith to win easily behind Hal Schumacher's steady pitching.

PHILS BEAT CUBS

The last-place Phillies fell on Pat Malone and Lynn Nelson in the seventh and eighth innings, scoring seven runs and beating Chicago 8 to 4. Chuck Klein led the winning attack with three hits but Gabby Hartnett distanced him by clouting his sixth homer and two singles in four times up.

After one day at the top of the American League, the Cleveland Indians dropped to second place again when they failed to hold the Philadelphia Athletics through the ninth inning and took a 7-3 licking. The idle New York Yankees automatically regained the lead by a few percentage points.

Although they touched Roy Mahaffey for only four hits, the Indians led, 3-2, going into the ninth. Then Wes Ferrell blew and the Cleveland infield blew with him. Five singles, two Indian errors, a walk, a sacrifice and a fielder's choice brought in five runs.

The Washington-Chicago and Boston-Detroit games were rained out.

PITT TRACKERS ENGAGE STATE HERE TODAY

By JESS CARVER

The varsity and freshman track and field squads of Pitt and Penn State have a rendevouz in the Pitt Stadium this afternoon, with the Nittany Lions, strange as it may seem, no better than even wagers to take the Panthers in the varsity engagement. The Panthers and Lions inaugurated track relations back in 1907, which is a long time ago anyway you look at it, and have met annually since 1921.

Of the 11 meetings since '21, Penn State has won 10 of 'em, with Pitt crashing the victory list in 1929. Today, the Panthers are conceded a fine chance of winning again; the chance being so good that even the Panthers are confident.

In meeting the Lions, the Panthers stack up against a team trained and tutored by one of the leading mentors of the country, the veteran Nate Cartmell, who has turned out more winners at Penn State than Rudy has notes in that saxophone. Cartmell's team this year does not appear to be as strong as usual, having been beaten by both Army and North Carolina State, but both meets were close and besides, there are a flock of teams in the country that won't beat either this year.

Included on the Lion squad are 16 men who scored against Pitt last year. The team is led by Capt. Wayland Dunaway, a star half-miler, has a capable sprinter in Dale and a trio of crack hurdlers in Van Kuren, Hill and Jackson.

Pitt will depend for its heavy scoring on Capt. Keller, Fleming, Schlossberg, Kiger, Sebastian, Clise on the track and Bonavita, Seiffert and Gongloff in the field.

The duel between the two leaders, Kellar and Dunaway, in the 880, in which event Kellar will be out to set a new district record, appears to be the high spot of the meet.

TECH GOLFERS MEET W. VA.

By TOM BIRKS

Collegiate golf holds the spotlight today in local links circles. At the Pittsburgh Field club, Carnegie Tech will make an effort to hand the Mountaineers, of West Virginia, another defeat. The Pitt-Faculty match at South Hills was called off on account of rain.

Tech defeated Jack Hobitzell and his Mountaineers at Morgantown two weeks ago, and naturally is eager to repeat that victory.

At Wildwood, the official opening is scheduled with a special golf tournament, followed by a smoker, on the card. Nelson Zimmerman expects to start 300 from the initial tee.

J. I. Crawford won the low gross prize as the Shady Side Academy alumni staged a one-day tournament at Churchill Valley yesterday. Crawford had a score of 76. W. N. McKelvey and O. K. Prize tied for low net honors with 72s. D. H. Baun won the kickers' handicap; J. A. Fownes the award for coming closest to the pin on No. 3; Scott Burke the prize for the longest drive on No. 14, and W. W. Martin, the association president, the sweepstakes handicap prize with a 78.

SARRON CLICKS IN KNOCKOUT

Little Petey Sarron, of Washington, D. C., quick as a flash of lightning and packing a punch, skyrocketed himself right into a natural match with Jackie Wilson when, making his local debut at the Arena last night, he technically knocked out the veteran Johnny Datto, local Filipino puncher, in 29 seconds of the first round of the semi-final 10-round bout.

The thing didn't last long enough for the fans to really get a good peek at Sarron, but they saw enough of his speed to figure out that he was just the sort of an opponent to cope with the will-o'-the-wisp Wilson.

Sarron rushed across the ring at the bell and let fly a flurry of punches, a right dropping Datto before he could get out of his corner. Johnny got up at the count of two, only to run into another rush which carried him to the ropes. Thick and fast flew Sarron's gloves, and Johnny had to hold onto the top rope with his right hand to steady himself, while his left dangled helpless. He was out on his feet, unable to protect himself, as Referee Joe Zivic intervened, and, after it was over, he stood in a daze, unable to realize what had happened.

WALLACE WINS, LOSES

Frankie Wallace, of Cleveland, outsmarted and outboxed Georgie Riley, Detroit Negro, in their 10-round return windup, but the judges disagreed and Referee Red Robinson's vote gave the battle to Riley, a most surprising award.

Wallace outmaneuvered his man to win every round but the fourth, which went to Riley on body punching and the sixth and ninth, in which Riley earned an even break.

Wallace, at a disadvantage in the matter of height and reach, used the ring well to stay out of danger and kept beating Riley to the punch as the latter stalked him and tried to line him up for his hard, fast right, which he scored cleanly only once in the entire fight. In their first meeting, in the same ring, recently, Riley lost by a technical knockout when he suffered a badly cut eye.

The Alabama Kid, Negro southpaw middleweight, of Dover, O., came from behind in the last five rounds to punch his way to a referee's decision over Joe Rugguzzoni, willing Detroiter, in the first 10-rounder, but the crowd went for Joe in a big way on account of his aggressiveness and booed the decision in loud and long fashion.

O'BRITTON STOPPED

The following card was announced for the Arena next Friday night:

Wesley Ramey vs. Harry Dublinsky, 10-round main bout, and Abe Lichtenstein vs. Red Bruce, Mike Sankovitch vs. Carl Gross, Johnny Hazel vs. Elmer Wilson and Harry Weekly vs. Joey Chemez, six rounds each.—HARRY KECK.

CRAWFORDS SET FOR ALL-STARS

The Philadelphia All-Stars and the Pittsburgh Crawfords will meet in a double header this afternoon at Greenlee Field. The All-Stars, classed as one of the finest Negro aggregations in the East, will be out to stop the winning streak of the locals. McDonald is expected to twirl for the All-Stars with Paige on the mound for the Crawfords.

The Cochrans, of the City League, meet the Altoona Works team this afternoon at Altoona.

A number of good games are listed for tomorrow. The Parmelee aggregation, with a fast club, meets McKees Rocks at Ranger Field.

The City League finally managed to get its inaugural off the books last evening as Bimmy Steele, in fine form, blanked Homewood, the Champion Books winning, 4 to 0. A three-run rally in the ninth inning put the game on ice for the Champions. Steele limited Bill Dalzell's rebuilt Homewood nine to five hits, while Carl Stewart, on the slab for Homewood, gave up six.

Billy Lentz, former South Hills High star, missed a chance to enter baseball's hall of fame last evening when he held the Pleasant Valley Greyhounds hitless for eight and two-third innings. A pinch-hitter drove out a single with two out in the ninth to ruin his chances of a no-hit game. Lentz, hurling for Ralph Waner's Penn State Club, won the game, 3 to 0. He fanned nine and gave two walks. In the Greater Pittsburgh League, the Vernovays defeated St. Clair, 2 to 1, while Swissvale and Springdale tied at 3-all.

BENEFIT POLO GAME

A benefit polo game under the auspices of the American Legion will be played on the Edgar Thomson Field, Braddock, Saturday afternoon, May 27. The 107th Field Artillery and 308th Cavalry teams will furnish the competition.

OUIMET'S GOLF

By FRANCIS OUIMET

Former National Amateur and Open Golf Champion.

Many years ago, in 1911 to be exact, Harold Hilton came to this country to compete in our Amateur Championship. At the time he was the holder of the British Amateur title, his fourth success in this event, and also had won the British Open twice. Therefore, with this record in back of him, he easily was one of the outstanding competitors to win our title, and, of course, it is a matter of record that he accomplished the stunt.

Francis Ouimet

One thing about Hilton's game impressed me most favorably. I always had been led to believe that one of the most important things conducive to successful golf is that of keeping the eye on the ball. Hilton seemed to violate this principle to such an extent that in the process of actually taking his eye off the ball he jerked his head in such a manner that his golf cap frequently was tossed off his head. It seemed that if such a great golfer as Hilton could take his eye off the ball or lift his head, there was no particular need for looking at the ball.

However, years of experience have taught me that regardless of what some of the great golfers do, the average player and the leading golfers, too, must absolutely rivet their eye on the ball until the ball actually has left the club head.

A few days ago, I played a round of a stiff layout in 70 shots, which was about as well as I could possibly hope to play. The very next day, on the same course and under easier conditions, I was 10 strokes higher. In the round of 70, I was placing my tee shots just where I wanted to, my irons were reaching the greens and frequently I succeeded in holing 10 to 15-foot putts. I felt as if I would score well because there was nothing to interfere with my concentration, and I could glue my eyes on the ball and know they would stay there until after the ball left the club head.

The very next day, in the round of 80, I had great difficulty in keeping my head down. In fact, with a mind that wandered, I merely went through the business of hitting the ball in a mechanical sort of way, and, while I hit some shots well, particularly the long ones, I missed no fewer than six putts of from two to three feet, to say nothing of gumming up a great many easy chip shots. The reason for this poor round was because I could not keep my head down.

In my many years of play and observation, I have taken great pains to watch the leading players. I have seen Sarazen and Bobby Jones, to name just two men, play dozens of shots that were extremely critical, shots that were to salt away a championship beyond all doubt. When they were confronted with the all-important stroke, they seemed to exaggerate the business of keeping their eye on the ball, but that was their way of assuring themselves that a decent shot would reult.

It is just as important to keep the head down and fasten the eyes on the ball on the shortest putt as it is on the longest tee shot.

If one can cultivate the habit of consistently looking at the ball, he will, in my opinion, reduce his scoring considerably and eliminate many of the simple mistakes that usually crop up when the eye has been removed even for an instant. While one or two outstanding players, such as Hilton was, can violate this so-called principle and get away with it, it is merely because their swing has become so well grooved that they can hit the ball satisfactorily on most occasions. However, even the good player can ill afford to make a practice of lifting his head.

three rounds, but in the fourth Bill made one a bit too good for Blondy Ryan and the new shortstop smacked the ball into the stands for a three-run homer. Each side had scored a run in the first so that the home team was out in front with a three-run lead on the merit of Ryan's sock.

Swift did a very unusual thing for Swift in the fifth. Bill walked Vergez with the bases loaded to force in a run. Leon Chagnon relieved Swift at this point and Chagnon, too, issued a pass with the bases jammed.

More Giant hitting and some loose Pirate play gave the New Yorkers two more in the seventh, and with Hal Smith opposing them in the eighth the home guards picked up three markers through the aid of another base hit party and more loose play by the Freebooters.

The first contest of three-game series for the open soccer championship of Western Pennsylvania will be played at the Duquesne University grounds this afternoon, with the Curry and the Castle Shannon McKnight elevens clashing.

Curry, a senior club, naturally is the favorite. The young McKnight club will have to stop Buff Donnelli, which is a test for any soccer team.

The game will be called at 3:15 sharp, and a large crowd is expected.

INTERNATIONAL POLICY SCORED

A policy of national individualism will be of greater benefit to the United States than one of international co-operation, according to Dr. William W. Cumberland, economist, and a partner in Wellington & Co. He spoke last night at the annual dinner of the Pittsburgh Branch of the Foreign Policy Association in the Hotel Schenley.

Dr. Cumberland said:

"The first step of real importance is to increase the industrial activity within the country rather than across its borders."

Dr. Harold Glenn Moulton, president of the Brookings Institute in Washington, expressed grave doubts that the World Economic Conference to be held in London during June would accomplish anything.

Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of Carnegie Institute of Technology, was re-elected chairman of the association.

3 TRUCK HOLDUP SUSPECTS HELD

Three men were being held for court without bail today, four others were under $1,000 bail each, four awaited hearings, and two had been released, as state police attempted a cleanup of what they said were three truck hi-jacking jobs last month.

Merchandise totaling $7,000 was reported lost in the holdups.

Arraigned before Justice of the Peace Bernard Volk, Raymond Tierno, 21, of New Alexandria; Joseph Hanlon, 20, of 32 Emma street, Pittsburgh, and James Pugh, 22, of 2008 Home avenue, Pittsburgh, pleaded not guilty to robbery charges and were held without bail.

Patsy Tierno, brother of Raymond, was implicated by Pugh in one holdup but did not appear because, police said, he was serving a jail sentence.

The four held under bail were charged with holding receivers of stolen goods.

MOVIES, RADIO IN CAMPS

WARREN, Pa., May 13.—The recreation problem is being effectively attacked in the Conservation Corps camps scattered through the Allegheny National Forest, according to the officers in command. Reforestation work also has progressed more rapidly during the past few days, with arrival of better weather.

Portable motion picture machines, radios, books and puzzles supplied by the neighboring townspeople have helped the young recruits to enjoy their leisure hours.

Church services for all denominations also are held each Sunday.

BENEFIT SHOW IN EAST END

There will probably be a noticeable upturn in retail grocery sales in the East Liberty district today on account of the purchases of "tickets" for the "Mothers' Day" food benefit show at the Sheridan Square Theater, for the poor of Sacred Heart Church parish. This affair as usual is under the auspices of the Emerson Club, of which the Rev. Father E. Lawrence O'Connell is director. As usual donations of food will be the only requirements for "tickets."

The show will begin at 2 p. m. and run continuously until 11 o'clock.

Oberlin Head Urges Colleges Oppose War

Direction of all functions in American colleges and universities toward disarmament and establishment of international peace was advocated by Dr. Ernest Hatch Wilkens, president of Oberlin College, before students of the University of Pittsburgh yesterday. Substitution of scholars for diplomats in the forthcoming disarmament sessions also was urged.

CHAPTER XLVI.

The poker game in the flat that night lasted until 12 o'clock, and the rooms were blue with tobacco smoke before it was over. Edna went to bed at 10 o'clock, but Sharlie stayed in the living room, stretched out on the sofa with a magazine, listening to the slip and click of the chips on the mahogany table top, the rustle of cards, the sound of voices saying "I'll call you" or "Let's make this seven card peek."

It was the first time in her memory that she had sat up until the end of one of the family's poker games, and she was yawning and bored by the time she heard Mr. Collins remark that it was time he was thinking about leaving and going, home to get some beauty sleep.

He came into the living room with his coat over one arm, his tie a little to one side, and his face looking pale and puffy from over-eating and hours of smoking. Dodie, close behind him, said goodnight to Maud and Carl Hanaberry and then held out her hand to him. Eldon Dunn had vanished at the end of the game.

"I'm going to leave you people and clear away the debris from the dining room, Mr. Collins," she said to him. "Nothing is so melancholy looking as the dead 'makings' of a good evening when you see them the morning after. Good night . . . Come in and kiss mother, Sharlie, before you go to bed."

A MISTAKEN OPINION

Mr. Collins watched her disappear between the portiers with a look of admiration on his face. "Great sort of mother for for a girl to have, Sharlie," he remarked. "Young, modern, full of life—Just the kind of a mother to understand a girl's problems, give her the right kind of advice about things."

Sharlie nodded slowly. She had a vague idea that Dodie never had had a very good understanding of the things that affected her. She had not understood that Eddie Wallis affair at all, for instance. She had fairly pushed her into marriage with Eddie—a marriage that would have ruined Sharlie's life if Eddie had lived. Sharlie could see that now, and she remembered suddenly that it had been Edna who tried to prevent her and Eddie from getting married. She remembered how angry Edna had been, and how she had blamed Dodie for the whole affair. "Most mothers make it their business to find out who their daughter's friends are," she had told her. "Don't let her marry like this —let her go to business college. Give her something to do to keep her out of mischief." It came back to Sharlie that it had been Edna who had put up the money for her course at the Gerow Business School. Edna who found her the position at the Collins Company.

NOT MOTHER TYPE

"You'd be surprised to know that my mother's always been the baby of the family," she said suddenly. "We've all petted her and run after her and worked for her—my father and Edna and I, ever since I can remember. Edna's been more like my mother than anyone else, although she's not so very much older than I am. And Dodie's been like a sister. I've never even called her anything but Dodie. I love her better than I love anyone else on earth, but—"

But what? She had intended to say, "But she's not my idea of a mother." And she knew that she couldn't very well say a thing like that. She couldn't even think of it without feeling disloyal to Dodie, and yet she knew it was the truth. Some women were the mother-type by nature, and some weren't. That was all there was to it—Dodie, beautiful and lovely and clever as she was, simply was not the mother type, and Edna was. She took care of everyone who she thought needed care and would accept it from her.

"You know how Edna is," Sharlie went on, looking down at the little blue flames that licked the gas logs in the grate. "She really loves to mother people. I've noticed at the office that she always brings your raincoat from the rack on wet days, and reminds you that it's past your regular lunch time, and —"

She broke off abruptly as a sudden loud sound came from the dining room. The sound of Dodie singing one of her favorite blues, just behind the velvet curtains that hung in the doorway between the two rooms:

"Feelin' tomorrow
Like I feel today,
I'm going to pack my bag
and git away'—"

It was like a warning, and Sharlie knew that her mother was listening to what she was saying. "Let's go out into the hall. I'll walk down to the door with you," she murmured to Mr. Collins. She found his hat and overcoat and gloves for him, and they went into the hall.

There was a tiny bead of night-lamp glowing there, and smells of the other tenants' cooking seemed to drift up and down the narrow stairs, mingling with the woolly, dusty smell of the carpet. Sharlie seated herself at the top of the stairs.

"I want to talk to you," she said, and Mr. Collins sat down beside her.

"Been thinking things over?" he asked. "Made up your mind, Sharlie?" As he spoke she noticed once more that there was none of the tenderness in his voice that had been in it when he talked to Edna in the kitchen that afternoon.

"Yes, I've made up my mind," she said. "I just don't believe I'm the kind of pioneer woman who could go with a man down to a new place and be happy. Arizona seems terribly far away to me—and terribly uninteresting. I like you more than I like any other man; but I don't like you enough to bury myself down there for the rest of my life, waiting for the Boulder Dam to make that land valuable."

She spoke as crisply as she could, and she tried to make herself as unattractive as possible, bringing her eyes to his in a bright hard stare. "That's the way it is," she said in a voice that was as hard as brass.

JIM INDIFFERENT

"I see—You don't like me at all," said Mr. Collins. He got up from the stair beside her and stood there, looking down at the top of her head for a minute or two. "Well, guess that's all there is to be said," he added, and went heavily down the stairs.

Before he reached the bottom of them Sharlie heard the vestibule door open, and the sound of swift feet coming up. From where she sat she could see the top of Jim Barnum's soft gray hat. He whipped it from his head as he came around the turn of the stairs and saw her sitting at the top of them.

"Hello," she said to him, and he grunted a "Hello" to her as he brushed past her and unlocked the door of the Barnum's suite.

His indifference filled her with a sense of irritation all at once, although it had not bothered her at all during the past few weeks when Mr. Collins had been uppermost in her mind. She felt a sudden desire to say something to him that would hurt him, irritate him, too. "Your girl's going away in a week or two," she said just as he stepped into the hall of the Barnum's flat.

She heard him come back to her and stand just behind her. "What do you mean, Sharlie?"

She swung her head. "Why, just that Edna's going down to Phoenix, Arizona, about two weeks before Christmas—to open Mr. Collins' new office down there."

"How long is she going to be gone?"

She's not coming back at all. Or at any rate, she won't come back so long as he stays down there. She says so."

After a minute she heard him go back into his own hall. "Well, good-night," he said, and then he added as an after thought, "You'll miss him, won't you?"

She did not answer, and presently his door closed.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis.

Ultimate Good

The ultimate good will some day prevail,
So believe that the righteous cannot fail;
Believe in a scheme that is wholly just
And trust as a little child would trust
In virtue and honor, in truth and love,
And your days to the rhythm of your thoughts will move!

The ultimate good, though you cannot see
Sometimes, what the end of the road will be!
Be sure always as you press ahead
That somewhere the riddle has all been read,
And hold in your thinking no shade of doubt
That by someone the course has been charted out.

The ultimate good! How the wonder grows
As petal by petal the years disclose
The heart of life, as a perfect flower
Which fairer and sweeter grows, hour by hour!
The ultimate good! As you press ahead
Be sure the riddle has all been read.

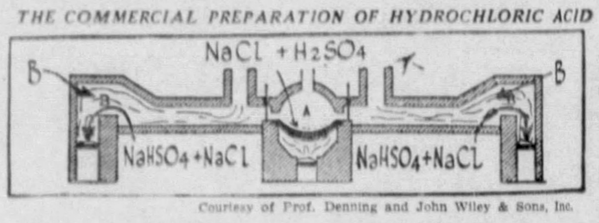
WILLIAM TYNDAL (c. 1490-1536) AND HIS FOLLOWERS

Tyndal is known for his English translations of the Bible from Hebrew and Greek and other works. Involved in religious disputes at the very "Dawn of Reformation," he was executed near Bruxelles Belgium, in 1536. (World's History.)

THE COMMERCIAL PREPARATION OF HYDROCHLORIC ACID (Chemistry)



Courtesy of Prof. Denning and John Wiley & Sons, Inc.

Iron pan A, containing salt, is mixed with sulphuric acid and gently heated. NaCl + H2SO4 = NaHSO4 + HCl. The resulting mixture of sodium acid sulphate and salt is transferred to the muffle furnaces (B, B) and highly heated. NaHSO4 + NaCl = Na2SO4 + HCl. The liberated HCl in each process is carried by an air current into water, which absorbs it, giving the commercial hydrochloric acid. The residue (Na2SO4) is used in glass manufacture. GYROSCOPIC PHENOMENA (Science)

Apparatus based on the gyroscopic phenomena is used to stabilize (counteract rocking) and direct ships accurately. Demonstration: Wheel A with shaft B-C is within a horizontal ring D, having axis E-F; ring D is mounted in a vertical ring G with journals H-J pivoting in vertical frame K. A weight W is hung on ring D. If wheel A is not rotating, the weight moves ring D out of the horizontal position, turning it around its axle E-F. If wheel A is rotating, ring D with weight W stays horizontal (except for a slight rocking), but the whole system turns around axle H-J (precession.) If arrow L indicates direction of spinning, M shows the precession, which is proportional to W (weight) and to the speed of wheel A. This is the gyroscopic phenomena in a system with three degrees of freedom (wheel A may turn about three axles relative to frame K.) (Chalmers: Gyroscopic Compass.)

PRINCIPLE OF TURBINES (Science-Transportation)

Above left: Water filled, suspended tank A issues through opening B a jet impinging upon flat board C, hung opposite. The impulse force of the jet moves C to the right and the reaction force (equal to the impulse) moves A to the left.

Above right: The jet plays on a block D with a curved surface that turns the jet back 180°. D receives the impulse and the reaction forces, about twice the impulse force. In a turbine B is the nozzle and C or D the rotor (bladed wheel.)

Left: DeLaval turbine using the impulse force of the steam expanding only in the conical nozzles and striking and turning the rotor with great velocity (35 to 45 miles per minute). The resulting high number of revolutions is reduced by gears. (Moyer: Steam Turbine.)

We Can All Help a Little Bit

The refusal of this writer to do any more public speaking is easily recognizable as an important section of the government relief plan.

It is a noble contribution to national welfare.

What have you to offer?

Can't you give up some musical instrument?

At least you don't have to keep your motor running while folks are trying to sleep at the next desk.

It would certainly help the country if you didn't insist on wearing a yellow polo coat with a straw hat.

Don't discuss the Manchurian question in the balcony of the movie theaters. Talking pictures were invented to monopolize the subject.

Keep your car in line on the week-ends. Thursday morning at dawn is the ideal time for rodeo work at the steering wheel.

There is one gag you can give up that will be relief for everybody. Stop making home brew. If you can't do that you can stop boasting about it.

Take those cinders out of your front walk and fix the hole with cement. We wear low shoes in the spring time and the stuff is tough on sox.

If you are a bridge dummy don't walk around the table and look over your partner's shoulder. The reason he took the bid from you was to keep you from playing the hand in the first place. And in bridge there is no second place.

If you arise to give your porch seat to your wife don't take the cushion with you.

Don't whistle while feeding the fantail goldfish. It disturbs the neighborhood. Oil the lawn mower if you have to use apple butter. Take your own toothbrush with you on the summer vacation. Keep your head out of dumbwaiter shafts and your feet dry. Don't hoard gold, and never pencil in your eyebrows an inch above the spot where your face stops.

If we can all work with Congress on these things we can say that the good old days are back for a return engagement.

Honest Elections

The Prevention of Fraud at the Polls Is of the First Importance—Comment on Local News.

*Encouraged by the persistent refusal of the Alle*gheny County courts to treat election fraud as a serious crime, crooked politicians are preparing to steal the approaching primary and again make a mockery of democratic government. Leo A. Riordan, county investigator, reports that the names of unnaturalized foreigners are being placed on the election rolls in large numbers as those of qualified voters.

Thousands of aliens were registered for the 1931 primary, and many other forms of election dishonesty practiced. Yet notwithstanding that the crooks had been warned by public expressions of indignation, notwithstanding that scores pleaded guilty or were convicted by juries, the courts chose to send only a comparatively few to jail, and paroled those few before they had completed their sentences!

The Sun-Telegraph criticized the judges for their leniency and also for dodging responsibility in many of the cases by referring them to visiting judges from other counties instead of trying them themselves. A handful of lawyers representing the Bar Association recommended that the judges hereafter do the very things that the Sun-Telegraph criticized them for not doing, yet declared the judges were not subject to criticism and rebuked the Sun-Telegraph for criticizing them.

The refusal of the judges and the Bar Association to become very indignant over violations of the election laws may be due to familiarity. They are case-hardened.

"Vice is a creature of such hideous mien
That to be hated needs but to be seen.
But seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

The United States government, thank goodness, has not become callous to election fraud. Notwithstanding its narrowly limited powers for dealing with such cases, which the states are ordinarily expected to handle, the Federal Court has taken cognizance of the cheating in Allegheny County at the last election and has ordered a special grand jury investigation.

It is announced that the United States grand jury's election inquiry will start on June 12. Earl F. Reed, the attorney who did so much to uncover corruption in the city government during the Kline administration, has been appointed special government prosecutor. What a rebuke this extraordinary procedure is to the Allegheny County courts for their inaction and indifference!

The Sun-Telegraph feels impelled to revert to this subject again and again, because we feel there is nothing more important to the people of this community than that only honest votes shall be cast and counted at elections. And it is specially needful that it should be emphasized at this time, because we are to have a hotly contested election in September, and, as Mr. Riordan points out, preparations are already being made to commit fraud.

*Opening his campaign for the Republican mayor*alty nomination, James F. Malone, former president of City Council, charged in a speech at the Schenley High School Thursday night that he actually won the election in 1929, but was cheated out of it by the casting of 25,000 fraudulent votes for the ticket of the Coyne-Herron machine. We are glad that he has raised this question of honest elections early in the campaign. It should not be permitted to become subordinate to other issues.

Differences of opinion exist as to the latitude to be enjoyed by the County Treasurer in issuing beer licenses. District Attorney Andrew T. Park is to act as the County Treasurer's representative in settling disputes. He is likely to have some delicate questions to solve if the Treasurer should undertake to discriminate between applicants for licenses on any other basis than on their good reputation—and probably also if that question is raised.

In Philadelphia the licensing authority has asked for a list of convicted bootleggers, and has been supplied with the names of 1,500 found guilty of violating the liquor laws since 1930. The supposition is that if any of these persons apply for beer licenses they will not get them. There is a good deal to be said in favor of such a policy.

Apropos of beer, a Pittsburgh girl who thought the statement that beer would make one gain weight was "just a lot of prohibition propaganda" reports that after drinking a bottle a day for a month she has gained seven pounds. But one swallow does not make a summer, and in the interest of scientific accuracy it is desirable that many other cases shall be studied before conclusions are drawn on this important question.

Good news comes from Washington in the report that Secretary of War George H. Dern and Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, Chief of Engineers, are considering the inclusion of flood control storage reservoirs at the headwaters of the Allegheny and Monongahela in the federal public works program, and have shown evidence of being impressed by the merits of the project.

The Flood Commission of Pittsburgh deserves a lot of credit for the perseverance with which it has adhered to its purpose, now, happily, with better prospect of success than at any time since the program was prepared about a quarter of a century ago. By dint of keeping everlastingly at it, it has achieved one objective after another—the raising of street levels, the creation of the Monongahela National Forest and the Allegheny National Forest.

Let us hope that the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal Commission also will succeed during the Roosevelt administration in winning federal approval. It has been at work longer than the Flood Commission. The proposed canal might well be financed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as a self-liquidating project. The tolls to be charged for the use of the canal would pay for it.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's testimony in court this week concerning the kidnaping and murder of his first-born baby makes peculiarly timely an article appearing in the American Weekly that is to be issued tomorrow as a supplement to the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. The article tells of the continuance of attempts to extort money from the Lindberghs. Many other interesting things will be found in the enlarged Weekly.

'Foreign Entanglements' -:- -:- -:-

By Nelson Harding

A bird of freedom should beware
Of being captured in a snare.
No cautious eagle will be found
To hover too close to the ground.

But soar far up above the earth
And give all traps a wider berth,
Though soothing words the cord may write,
The bird, if wise, will not alight.

Business Racketeers

Too Many Men in Commerce and Industry Submit to the Domination of Criminals.

By JULIUS G. BERENS
Financial Editor, New York American.

THE great majority of businessmen undoubtedly are anxious to rid this country of the vicious racketeering which is adding to the cost of living and disturbing the whole economic equilibrium.

But not all businessmen are lending the full share of co-operation to the movement toward eradication of this ugly and costly abuse.

Many businessmen, by their lack of vigorous opposition, aid and abet the spread of racketeering in legitimate business.

More than one trade or industry permits outright racketeering. Usually of course it is not called racketeering.

But how many trades utilize illegal unwritten agreements which depend for support on strong-arm enforcement?

HOW many lines of business submit meekly to orders and demands of an overlord depending for his power upon their own meek submission?

How many lines of industry enforce a closed-circle, by strong-arm methods, to keep out any newcomers in the field?

How many industries openly submit to dictation from a mysterious source, from whence springs violence frequently, whose financial support comes from contributions from the industry itself?

Businessmen undoubtedly know in such lines that they are submitting to a criminal element which has obtained control of their very businesses and who retain this domination by threats of violence to person and property.

Too many businessmen meekly submit to this domination by criminals.

Their unwillingness to unite in combatting the evils of racketeering encourages the spread of the abuse not only about themselves but also in other directions.

THE businessmen themselves can furnish the first line of resistance to the spread of racketeering.

They can also furnish the means whereby racketeering in legitimate business can be wholly eradicated.

Not until the businessmen are willing to lend their co-operation can the police and other public authorities successfully drive out the racketeer.

It is up to the legitimate businessman to drive out the racketeer!

BLUE EYES

By Winifred Black

Throw away your old lipstick girls!

Lips must be red this year, not purple—and the violet powder and the lilac colored rouge—that's out, too.

And as for platinum blondes—they're simply out of the fashion.

Red heads, attention! Make up your minds to dye your hair brown or wear a wig—nobody loves you any more—not this year, anyway.

The beauty experts have spoken and they say that the beauty of 1933 must be five feet five, weigh about 125, have brown hair and blue eyes. Well, that's all easy enough—except the eyes.

You can dye your hair, you can nibble chocolate and fatten up a bit, or you can starve yourself and thin down—you can even "scrooch" and take off an inch or two from your height, but oh those eyes of gray or brown or black or hazel—what to do about it, what to do about it?

You might as well be dead as to have eyes of the wrong color, you know that, don't you?

The young man who is such a "swell dancer"—he asks you to dance with him every other evening doesn't he? But, oh, the minute he discovers that your eyes are an old-fashioned brown or an impossible hazel, he won't care whether they flash or sparkle or swim in ecstacy—they're the wrong color and that settles it.

The beauty doctors say so, and the beauty doctors certainly know—or they ought to know, anyhow.

Height, weight, hair, eyes, I've heard a young fellow lay down the law to his sisters about these highly important things, and then step out and fall desperately in love with some girl whose eyes are wrong, whose hair is wrong, whose figure is wrong—and what care he!

Not the weight of a shaving.

What are they trying to do anyhow, these beauty experts, turn us all into little wooden women with the same faces, the same hats, the same dresses?

Black eyes, I love them, don't you? Brilliant, blazing, daring, bold, defiant, gallant, courageous black eyes.

Gray eyes, they rule the world, they say. Cool, intelligent, observing, critical gray eyes—gray eyes for an emergency every time.

Brown eyes, soft, pleading, swimming, trusting brown eyes, do you know a pair of them, that you would go around the world to see—again?

Blue eyes, laughing, mischievous, innocent, teasing—what tales they can tell, those blue eyes we all know and remember, through all the dull years.

What difference does the color make if you love the owner of them. And what do you care for all the beauty doctors in the world, when the old song begins to sing in your heart and all the world is lit with that strange glory? Some people call it moonlight, don't they? But I've seen it light up a plain face in broad daylight, too—haven't you?

A face that means honor and trust and loyalty and confidence, and simple, honest truth to the one who is wise enough to understand.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

You envy the man who speaks well in public.

Many men whom you have heard make addresses are not as well informed on their subjects as you are but they can talk more easily.

You say, "I have it in me but I can't get it out".

Perhaps you are too self-conscious.

Those fellows to whom you refer think very little about themselves.

They want to put over what they know, and they accomplish it.

It is fatal to make excuses for yourself to yourself.

It is the message that is important when a talk is to be given.

Often the ready talker you admire deals more in generalities.

Pretty smooth, while he is going, but when you think it over, not much real information.

But he put it over because he forgot himself and so could do uninterrupted talking.

To speak fluently you must forget yourself and that means training.

As long as "YOU" are the big subject in your thoughts you will not be able to think chronologically or speak connectedly and convincingly on your feet.

Marry-Go-Round

Passing the Paprika

The divorce court is the "Repair Department" for all the misfit matches, which are "made in Heaven."

Marriage should be ranked among the arts and crafts since it requires so much art to get a husband, these days, and so much craft to hold onto him.

When a man says, "I'm glad to know that you're so broad-minded, Little Girl," what he really means is, "I'm glad to know that you're so weak-minded."

The Prohibition era will be remembered for lots of things, including gin-drinking youth, gangster rule and nudism. But, most poignant of all, it will go down in History as the twelve most BORESOME years the world has ever known.

The great divide among business women, is between those who work their brains and those who work their eyes.

In Hollywood, it's a "perfectly happy marriage," if it doesn't make the first page for six months.

The young man who is most particular about selecting a glamorous girl to take to the prom, this June, will probably be just as careless as any of the others about what he leads to the altar.

Being married to a good-natured man is easier on the nerves; but somehow, nothing makes life duller for a woman than living with a man who doesn't know how to lose his temper occasionally.

* * *

No matter how often a successful, strong-minded woman marries, she always falls for a mental adolescent and takes another boy to mother.

If Shakespeare had been writing for the movies, he probably would have called Macbeth "The Naughty Lady," made Lady Macbeth a blonde, worked in a sex-scandal and brought the whole thing to a happy ending with dancing nymphs from Burnham Wood.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, May 13.—The Sealyham has his say: I'm supposed to be a clown dog just because I haven't the dignity of the Boston. My hair won't lay straight. But nobody's supposed to have dignity when they're just two going on three. What do they expect? Anyway I'm not over my fright yet.

I was born—might as well be autobiographical, all the writers are—in Beverly Hills. Out on the Ben Ray Meyers place. One time in New York while dining with my present master, Mr. Meyer said: "How'd you like to have a Sealyham?"—not knowing that bird would take anything offered.

So, Mr. Meyers returned and I was taken from two brothers, a sister and an adoring mother. I never say my father. I've heard he is now a retired Don Juan on the Will Rogers place. Also I understand he deserted many other ladies in his day, the old Casanova.

They nailed me in a box and put me on a train. That trip is why I'm such a fraidy at sudden noises. For five days it was a nightmare of lurches, quick stops, strange whistles and clanging bells. Just the other day they took me down to a railroad station and I tossed a conniption fit right before all those people.

Crossing the continent they gave me food but I didn't want to eat. O, well, not more than four or five times a day. I thought I would never get to wherever I was going. It looked like dirty work at the cross roads. I was only an itty-bitty shaver who had never been out of the yard

* * *

Finally when I'd lost hope we went through a dark tunnel and stopped a long while. Some men came around, lifted me into an express wagon and the next thing I knew I was in my new home. They took me in the back way when as a matter of fact I have a pedigree longer than anyone around this house. I go back to the Hugenots but from the start they never appreciated me in this house.

* * *

Everybody crowded around while they uncrated me, peeping and making cracks. Finally they lifted me to the floor and there I was in the kitchen. I shook myself of a few doo-dads picked up along the way, such as nails, bolts, pieces of twine and a smear or so of axle grease. Then Harry, the colored man, gave me a bath and would you believe it I was as clean, fluffy—and may I add pure?—as the driven snow. Then he rolled me in a blanket and I had the swellest snooze since I left mama. I certainly hit it off, great guns.

* * *

Some time later—after theater, I think—I was awakened and saw my new mistress and master bending over me. They were dressed up like Mrs. Astor's plush horse. I have some of my father's flattery so I wagged my tail, sniffled their shoe tips and licked their outstretched hands. Then I decided to cute them. So I raced around the house in dizzy whirls, winding up before them on one haunch with my pink tongue clear down to here. I knew I had them smack in the palm of my paw. They were mine for the asking.

* * *

The master is skinny and something of a comic valentine. The mistress is my choice and the Boston's, too, but the master always speaks of us as "My dogs!" He thinks he's quite a person, but you ought to see him in long underwear. They gave me the sissiest name—Rainbow. Isn't that darling? Sound's like mother's little beam of light when as a matter of truth I'm a hard mutt. You ought to see me when nobody's looking. Pop in some time and get an eyeful of the piano legs. I gave every one of them the works after I had been spanked plenty for gnawing the seat out of a chair. I began gnawing on a kitchen stool and worked up to piano legs in less than 10 days. See, that big hole in the parlor carpet. Well, that's mine after I'd had a tough day chasing a cat. I don't know my own strength.

* * *

The Boston thinks he has me bluffed. He nipped me the first day when I was all scared up from traveling and I let him get away with it. But every dog has his you-know and will the fur fly. He hasn't many teeth anyway. It's not bad in the city, but I'll take California. How I miss those palm trees! I'd like to see some tough dogs, too. All I see have leashes, fancy collars and other fol de rol. In the park the other day I even found myself playing with a Pekinese that wore a pink ribbon neck bow. Imagine what the gang in California would think of that!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

My little mother has gone.

Somewhere, down those vast, bright distances ahead, that small, stalwart figure goes trudging on—with the shadows erased forever from her laughing lips, and eager eyes.

Brave little mother, whom I knew so long, yet knew so little! Eighty-seven years of life—what a lot she got out of it! What a lot she put into it! And, sleeping, already her brow lifted toward the next adventure.

God grant you get it, dear—endlessly, jealously!

As for me, I have your cane. I could wish no finer thing to treasure for the rest of my life.

My mother's cane. I cannot even guess what bitterness she must have felt when she first was forced to use it. She had always been so free—a neat, swift little figure, moving lightly through the aisles of her roses, under the vines and dark shrubs and tall tossing trees with which she wrought such quick, cool magic on the raw frontier. Housework? She despised it. Tame chores for tabby cats! But given half a dozen acres of wild soil, and a climate that listened when an English-Irish lady spoke her mind—and she'd make a Paradise.

Yet, when she was little more than half way through her years, the cane came. A broken hip. She'd have no doctoring. How did she stand the pain? How did any of them stand the pain—that old, grim, gay breed of humans who laugh at us for mollycoddles? But, whatever the pain, it could never have touched the agony she must have known when first she felt the limp.

Never to go free and quick again!

Never again to move so arrogantly sure!

I can't bear to think of it. Yet she could bear to live it—she who had as great a contempt for resignation, or even for patience, as she did for anesthetic.

So she took her cane. If a cane was part of life, she would use a cane as she used all life. But there was to be no misunderstanding on the subject. She used the cane. The cane did not use her. She took that cane as she'd taken every other handicap that faced her in this alien land. As she'd taken poverty, loneliness—the fierce, raw soil—the hostile sun—the stubborn rocks—that fought her will to beauty.

Dispute her will?
Cramp her style?
Never!

Cane or no cane—she was "the master of her fate, the captain of her soul."

So, laughing, frowning, storming, she went limping through life. And life, I sometimes thought, stood back, properly abashed, and let a lady pass.

And now she's gone. In the scarlet dress she loved best, with a white rose at her throat and a little teasing smile at the corner of her mouth—and one eyebrow lifted in a triumphant tilt—

And I have her cane.

I, who could never touch even the margin of her courage—who limp so badly without a broken hip!

And some, I suppose, will wonder why one should want to keep the thing that meant another's agony. But if it meant agony, it also meant victory. And God knows we have all too few symbols of that! So for me, it's treasure—that plain, worn bit of wood—something to hold to when the way's too hard—

As one holds to the cross, forgetting the God, perhaps; remembering only the tortured man who dared to choose to die for the sake of the thing he loved.

They lived—those two. He, with His cross. She, with her cane. And all those others, limping down the same, hard trail—

They lived—

In spite of everything, they lived.

THEN SO SHALL I!
